

Chamber Group Approves Four-Point Program To Speed Up Aviation Here

A four-point program to speed up aviation development here was proposed by the chamber of commerce aviation committee and approved by the directors at Wednesday's luncheon meeting. Following up this action, the aviation committee will propose to the city of Klamath Falls through its airport commission:

1. That the city apply for CAA designation of the Klamath field as "open."
2. That the city move as rapidly as feasible to setting up an administrative program at the field.
3. That the city request use of the navy hangars.
4. That the city complete its request for all the buildings and other facilities, now in possession of the navy, which the city will want for permanent possession and use.

Aviation Retarded

E. G. Newbill, chairman of the aviation committee, said his group feels that the present policy of the city is retarding aviation activity in this area. He stated the committee does not want to demand any rash action on the part of the city, but that it feels the city should begin now to work out the administration program it must inevitably develop on the field.

Aviation committeemen said there is real need for civilian use of the navy hangars, and they voiced concern lest inactivity or evidence of lack of interest on the part of the city might lead to disposal of such facilities elsewhere.

Not Present

Representatives of the city were not present, but Mayor Ostendorf was reported having favored a policy of caution against hasty action that might involve the city in maintenance costs or other obligations that might otherwise be avoided.

Director Merle West of the chamber voted against the committee's report, on the grounds that no one seemed to know just what might be entailed for the city if the committee's recommendations were adopted. Committeemen replied their purpose was to stimulate active consideration of the problems involved looking toward some early settlement.

Employment Said Picking Up Here

Employment is picking up at the local U. S. employment service office, it was stated today.

With the melting of snow some activity is shown in lumber industry operations and positions are opening up in this field for skilled workers and maintenance men.

Farmers are getting machinery in shape for spring operations and in some areas soil is reported getting "mealy," an indication that it will be ready for plowing soon if heavy rains hold off.
