UNO Discussed By Symposium

The United Nations organization was the topic under discussion by a symposium made up of eight Clifton high school students at a meeting of the Klamath county high school teachers last Saturday morning at the county library.

Previous plans for world peace since World War I such as the League of Nations, the Washington Conference, the Kellogg Briand Peace Pact were also mentioned, as well as the place the school has in the building of present-day world-wide peace.

The panel was under the direction of Mrs. Ann Rife, Clifton high school instructor. Students participating were Ramona Smith, chairman; Georgia Priebe, Remo Minato, Rose Marie Floyd, Kenneth Luderman, Mary Christy, Mary Monks and Bonnie Mae Geinger.

Following the panel a discussion of the Oregon state health course was conducted by Mrs. Isabelle Brixner.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read by Rose O'Leary with Dea Jean Wright presiding.

Local Men Buy Grocery

Death Claims Charles Brown

Charles Olmstead Brown, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Carlton O. Brown of 1022 Lytton, this city, and also rancher of the Crystal district, died at Klamath Valley hospital at 8 a. m. Wednesday following an illness of the past six months. Death was attributed to undulant fever.

Charles, a 7th grader at Fairview, became ill last fall and his condition was declared serious last December.

In addition to his parents, two brothers, Ober and William, and three sisters, Mrs. Josephine Lyon of Malin, Virginia Brown of Crystal, and Mrs. Margaret J. McCrea of Agness, Ore., survive. Ward's will announce arrangements later.

Flocks Of Grosbeaks Seen In Many Parts Of Klamath

By MRS. F. O. SMALL
Nature Director for Camp Fire Girls

Many people have been inquiring what those strikingly beautiful birds are, a little smaller than a robin, which have appeared in flocks of a hundred or more in many parts of town. They are western evening grosbeaks.

The birds are lemon yellow in color with black crowns, short black tails, black and white wings, and a lemon-colored bill with a broad yellow band above it.

The first law of adaptation, we are told, is that when a part is needed that part is supplied, so we find our evening grosbeaks with cone-shaped bills especially adapted to crushing seeds and typical to all members of the sparrow family to which they belong, since seeds make up by far the greatest part of their diet.

Fond Of Seeds
Evening grosbeaks seem especially fond of the seeds of the box elder but any seed large or small is to their liking. You may have seen them apparently enjoying picking out the seeds from the frozen apples left hanging on their trees.

They are very erratic in their movements, sometimes appearing here early in the fall or at any time in the winter which suits their fancy. In the spring the majority fly farther north to nest in the evergreens but I have found some nesting on the west side of Klamath lake. Every winter brings them to Klamath Falls where signs of their presence may be seen on the sidewalks or on the ground under the trees having awned seeds, for in eating the seeds the wings or awns are discarded.

Soon Leave
The evening grosbeaks with their cheery chatter will soon be leaving us but their place will be taken by a near relative of the same family, the black-headed grosbeak, a strictly western bird, much fewer in number, but also beautiful though quite different in color. The black-headed grosbeak's cheerful rollicking song may be heard in summer on Lakeshore drive. They are worth looking and listening for.

WATER CONTRACTS
PORTLAND, Ore., March 20 (AP)—Reclamation bureau officials reported today that 150 of the 200 Oregonians who own acreage in the Columbia basin irrigation project have signed contracts for water.

The bureau held a meeting for the area's land owners here yesterday.

Merrill Recluse Waives Hearing

George Washington Harvey, 65-year-old Merrill recluse charged with assault, armed with a dangerous weapon, waived preliminary hearing in justice court yesterday afternoon and was returned to the county jail in lieu of $2500 cash bail.

He was involved in an attempted horseback holdup of a Merrill service station two weeks ago and was arrested a few days later at his dugout home in the hills northeast of Merrill.
