RFC Will Aid Small Firms

J. S. McCullough Jr., manager of the San Francisco loan agency of the reconstruction finance corporation, announced today that the corporation has established a procedure to assist small business, including veterans who qualify as small business, in acquiring surplus property under Section 18 (E) of the surplus property act, the administration of which was recently transferred by executive order to the RFC from the smaller war plants corporation.

Under the act the RFC has the authority to purchase surplus property for resale to small business when in its judgment such disposition is required to preserve and strengthen the competitive position of small business. Any business privately owned and operated for profit which is not dominant in its field; is not affiliated with an organization dominant in its field; and has less than 500 employes, will generally be regarded as "small business." The priority established by section 18 (E) is expected to be exercised only in those situations where the small business concern is unable to procure with reasonable effort the property desired from designated disposal agencies or through normal channels of trade.

Such additional information as may be required by prospective purchasers or others interested may be obtained by inquiring at the office of the San Francisco agency, 200 Bush, or its branch office at 1355 Market, room 743. Forms for filing application under the procedure will likewise be available at those offices as soon as they can be printed.
