

Growing Of Ornamental Trees Said Difficult Here

Editor's Note: This is the first of two installments of an article on gardening in the Klamath country. The second will follow in a later edition.

By MRS. W. P. MYERS

The successful growing of ornamental trees and shrubs in this mountainous altitude of over 4000 feet, and the arid conditions which prevail in this region east of the Cascades presents a difficult problem to the home builder in this section of the state. The answer is largely one of trial and experience to determine the class and variety which will best survive the hazards of winter and withstand the dryness of summer.

Negro Admits Knife Murder

PORTLAND, April 3 (AP)—A negro whom detectives said confessed slaying a 73-year-old negro woman, Mrs. Hagar Mary Cugno, was under arrest here today.

Detectives Bard Purcell and Michael O'Leary said the man, Robert Walker, Portland, signed a confession saying he killed the aged woman only a few days after completing a sentence on another knife.

The woman, her head almost severed, was found in her bed Monday night by neighbors who had noticed her missing for several days.

The detectives said Walker admitted he had given Mrs. Cugno $775 in savings and wanted it back.

Walker was booked on a charge of murder, and held without bail. No formal charge has been filed.

Typhoon May Hit In Philippines

MANILA, April 3 (AP)—A typhoon with a center velocity of 100 to 115 miles an hour is moving toward the Philippines and may hit northern Luzon by tomorrow, the Philippine sea frontier announced today.

Vice Adm. James L. Kauffman, the frontier commander, ordered naval vessels in the Manila area removed to the Olongapo naval base 60 miles west, where they have better protection.

Winds of 25 to 28 miles an hour on the fringes of Manila are expected to increase to around 50 miles an hour by noon tomorrow. However, Kauffman said, no danger from the winds was expected in this area.

Cotton Clothing Order Scheduled

WASHINGTON, April 3 (AP)—A government order designated to halt rising prices for cotton clothing probably will be issued this week, an OPA official said today.

Samuel Levitt, retiring director of the price agency's consumer goods division, made this report at a farewell news conference but did not elaborate.

Other officials who declined to be named said, however, Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles may order Secretary of Agriculture Anderson to issue the regulation unless Anderson does so voluntarily.

Klamath Given Land For Park Addition

Riverside school through Moore park and returning to the city over Fremont bridge, will afford a fine view of Klamath Falls and surrounding country.

The development of Klamath Falls is closely associated with the Moore family. William S. Moore, father of Charles L. Moore and Rufus S. Moore, came over the plains from Illinois in 1848 at the age of 19 years and settled in the Willamette valley. In 1868 he moved to Klamath Agency and in 1870 built a sawmill for the government there. In 1877 Moore constructed a sawmill on the west side of Link river about half way between Linkville and Upper Klamath lake.

While this was not the first sawmill in the region it sawed lumber for most of the buildings of Linkville (now Klamath Falls). This was never a log cabin town. From the first, houses were built of lumber obtained at the Moore mill or brought in from other mills.

Serves Community
Always civic minded, the family has served the community in many ways. William S. Moore was Klamath county's first judge. Charles L. Moore was state treasurer for two terms. Rufus S. Moore was one of the original members of the city park board and served from the time of its inception in 1913 until his death in 1931.

The present members of the city park board are Mayor Ostendorf, chairman; Police Judge Harold Francy, secretary; City Engineer E. A. Thomas, O. D. Matthews, C. H. Underwood, Alfred D. Collier, Mrs. G. A. Krause and Dr. E. D. Lamb. Bert Stott is park superintendent.

WASHINGTON, April 3 (AP)—The trials of "basic training as a civilian" were described by a GI from Missouri in a letter to Rep. Gillie (R-Ind.).

"The army says I can't wear a uniform after I arrived home because I'll be impersonating a soldier.

"The stores say I can't buy a suit of clothes because they haven't my size.

"The police say I can't go on the streets naked because it is against the law.

"I would gladly stay off the streets but I can't find a house to live in and with the shortage of lumber I can't buy a barrel.

"Having been wounded, the army won't take me back because I'm not physically fit.

"I shall be 21 in 1948. Can you tell me who will be running on the republican ticket for president?"

DA-Judge Tiff Grows Hotter

Juvenile court, before Judge Vandenberg, as a delinquent trial on January 22, Humble said, and there was "no possible further criminal action against her because of her age." He pointed out that Vandenberg deferred a judgment of the delinquency case until March 28, nine days after the trial of Mrs. Lusk came into court.

The ruling, Humble said, returned the girl to the custody of her mother.

Good Case

Of the Dickenson case which yesterday precipitated the open courtroom fight, the district attorney said that he believed he had made a good case before the jury and that members of the jury told him after a directed verdict stopped the trial that Dickenson would have been convicted had the case come to them.

"Balentine, Dickenson's attorney, is one of the ablest defense lawyers in the state," Humble added, "and his joining issue by putting on testimony was an admission that the prosecution had made a good case."

Judge Vandenberg yesterday handed down a directed verdict of not guilty in the bad check case, contending that Humble had not proved the essential element of the indictment, guilty knowledge that on the $77.48 check was bad, on the part of Dickenson.

Raps Judge

Two more criminal cases are on the docket, one starting Monday, and Humble stated that he could not legally file an affidavit of prejudice against the circuit judge but that the judge could file an order excusing himself from the bench and his office would be "glad to draw up the order for him."

In defense of the court, Vandenberg went back to the Heuvel trials when Judge Arlie G. Walker of McMinnville was on the bench. The district attorney, he said, signed the motions for dismissal of two charges, contributing to the delinquency of a minor and rape, against Earl Heuvel, saying that two indictments involving similar charges against Heuvel had been unsuccessfully tried and that the prosecution was unable to obtain sufficient evidence to try the other two cases.

"But," Vandenberg asserted, "no contributing case had been tried and the necessary witnesses were in Klamath Falls and had been brought here by the prosecution."

He mentioned the Lusk case, bringing out that R. F. McLaren, on stipulation from the district attorney, and Mrs. Lusk had been allowed to visit the state's primary witness, Florence Lusk, at the juvenile cottage the afternoon before the trial was to start.

When that trial broke down over the girl's refusal to testify, Vandenberg believes that a case could have been made by using other witnesses, but no others were brought into court.

"Cases should be prepared by the district attorney prior to bringing them into court and tried in court and not on the street," the judge declared.

Of the Dickenson trial, Vandenberg said that the prosecution had not proven that Dickenson was guilty and that if no one made a motion for a directed verdict he would have
