

13 Klamath Candidates Seek Berths

The names of 13 Klamath area candidates, aspirants for seven political offices, will be on the nominating ballots when voters of this county go to the polls for the primary election May 17.

Klamath county has a democratic candidate for nomination to congress, two republican and one democratic candidate for the state lower house, two non-partisan candidates for circuit judge, two republican running for county surveyor, a democrat and a republican candidate for county commissioner, a democrat and a republican up for re-election as constable in two districts, and a democrat running unopposed for county tax assessor.

The fight for the judgeship, between incumbent David R. Vandenberg and District Attorney Clarence A. Humble, took the early political spotlight and is one of the only two races which will be decided in the primary.

There are two republican candidates for the surveyor post, Frank Z. Howard and Wally Hector, and party voters will be called upon to choose one party standard-bearer.

No Opposition
W. Lamar Townsend, democrat opposing Lowell Stockman, republican, for congress, has no opposition for the nomination but has been actively campaigning over the Oregon second district for several weeks.

Republicans Rose Poole and Troy Cook and Democrat Henry Semon are nominees for the county's two posts in the state legislature. There will be two candidates named for each party or Cook will also receive the other democratic nomination, or a write-in candidate may be selected.

Fred Pope, Fort Klamath, republican, and Ernest William (Bill) Massey, Klamath Falls democrat, are each unopposed for their party nomination for county commissioner.

Newton Nelson, democrat, is unopposed for another term as county tax collector; Ed Davis, Merrill democrat, has no opposition for the Tulelake district constable post, and Gary B. Cozad, republican, is unopposed for re-election as Linkville district constable.

In addition to the party and non-partisan balloting, city voters will be asked to pass on three proposed measures May 17. Two are paving project measures and the other provides for retirement of city employees.

in the hotel—and thank your lucky star for the privilege. The plaintive note in the room clerk's voice when he asks how long you're going to stay is more marked than ever. If you tell him you're in only for the night he leaps ebulliently over the counter, kisses you on both cheeks and salaams. If you're set for the limit (seven days here, praise the Lord), he reaches under the counter for his trusty baseball bat.

THIS writer nurses one shining dream—to live far enough in the brave new world to be welcomed in by a hotel keeper who actually wants business and doesn't hesitate to admit it.

As it is, you're scowled at when you arrive but palavered over when you leave—because when you leave it gets one more impatient customer off the room clerk's neck.

THE hotels now have a new dodge. They're bookkeeping conventions, but require the delegates to remove their badges in the lobbies.

You can hardly blame them, for if there's one thing that sets your teeth on edge and turns the hair on the back of your neck straight up it's being turned away from a hotel that is crawling with convention delegates all decked out in badges and greeter smiles.

In justice to the hotel people, it must be added that the mere thought of being stuck with a convention throws them into the screaming meemies—but the American people are the greatest jiners on earth and now that the shooting war is over they just WON'T be denied their conventions any longer.

Paul Lee To Take Trip To Montreal

The meeting is sponsored by the Klamath Scottish Rite bodies and Leslie M. Scott, SGIC in Oregon, is expected to be present to assist in making the presentations.

More Funds Added To Baseball Coffers

The military affairs committee has turned over the balance of its funds amounting to some $740 to the city recreation committee to be used for the improvement of Recreation park for baseball this summer.

The committee followed the lead of the troop entertainment committee which recently donated $940.12 to the recreation committee. The donations will augment the $1500 the city has decided to allot for the ball park.

Like the funds from the troop entertainment committee, the military affairs money was a hold-over from the committee's war-time activities.

Defense Group Talks Logging

Logging and farming activities were the main topics under discussion at the meeting last night of the natural resources committee of the Modoc Defense council. The meeting, held at the Finney Logging company plant, Tionesta, was well attended.

Thomas J. Orr Jr., main speaker for the evening, spoke on selective logging practices and the sustained yield plan of Weyerhaeuser Timber company.

Regarding crops, Chester Main, chairman of Tulelake Growers association, stated that approximately 1000 acres of sugar beets have been planted in the Tulelake area this year, 800 acres of onions, 6000 acres of potatoes and 80,000 acres of grain, mostly barley. He said that the association is working toward getting permanent housing for farm laborers from the WRA camp.

Dinner was furnished and served by personnel of the Finney Logging company. Those attending from Klamath Falls were Jack Almeter and Les Finley of the U. S. employment service; Laurence Shaw and Thomas J. Orr Jr., of Weyerhaeuser Timber company, and A. B. Hood with interests both in California and Oregon.

The next meeting has been set for May 22, to be held at Crowder Flats and will be sponsored by the forestry service personnel.
