

Views Stated By Candidate

The Klamath County Democratic club met in the club room of the Klamath Falls city library April 26, with a representative group present.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Dora Goddard.

W. Lamar Townsend, candidate for representative in congressional district, opponent in the general election of Lowell Stockman, incumbent, spoke briefly to those present, stating that he would support legislation to strengthen UNO and that his international policy was being favorable to a strong armed force to protect our interest; and assistance to devastated countries in order to produce brotherly love and everlasting peace.

William Massey, candidate for county commissioner, addressed the group and stated that he was favorable to better roads on the main traveled thoroughfares of the county.

Temporary officers were elected pending adoption of a constitution and by-laws for the club, which, according to the report of Mrs. J. A. Mahoney, are being drafted for acceptance by the club.

The club went on record as being in favor of the continuance of OPA, without amendments or exemptions as now passed by the house of representatives, and the secretary was instructed to send telegrams to Senators Cordon and Morse requesting their support of such legislation, and any persons interested in the continuance of OPA were requested to address the senators.

Commendation of Judge David R. Vandenberg and the juvenile court was made by the president in the absence of the judge, who regretted being unable to attend the meeting due to a prior engagement before another group. Refreshments were served by Mrs. M. L. Shepherd, social chairman, and a social hour enjoyed.

you had lived then you'd have wanted to know him.

In most of his pictures, he looks too cold and intellectual for anyone to want to know.

WHEN the crowd is seated—chairs are provided for these dignified visitors; the regular press conference reporters stand—President Truman enters through a side door. His visitors rise, naturally.

The President is wholly relaxed and at home. He makes us feel at home. The late President Roosevelt was always completely at ease himself—and charming and thoughtful as well. But this man somehow is different. He is ONE of the common people, not merely gracious and friendly with common people.

HE speaks a few honey words of welcome, and then calls for questions after the manner of the regular press conferences. These editors, who boss the correspondents whose job it is to attend the regular affairs, are oddly bashful. Their questions are as halting and as stilted as those that usually follow when a distinguished speaker at a Knife and Fork club announces that he will try to answer questions if any are asked.

Finally an editor from Waterbury (Conn.) breaks the ice, asking Mr. Truman how about that black tie striped faintly with white he recently wore with his tux. The President laughs heartily. "The haberdashers told me it was the last word," he grins.

"Where," the Waterbury man asks, "can I get one like it?" "I'll loan you this one," the President chuckles, "if you'll see that I get it back."

(He does, too, and the man from Waterbury wears it the following night at the concluding banquet of the society, and gets much welcome kidding as a result.)

SPRINGTIME IN KLAMATH

It is springtime in dear old Klamath, grandure is reigning every where.

Fragrance of the early flowers is wafted on the balmy air. Buttercups along the hillside, pussywillows by the stream; Earth has changed her robe of ermine for a velvet dress of green.

By the lake shores and the rivers, where the gray squirrels hibernated.

Now the robin is gaily singing as he carols to his mate. Birds are nesting in the marshes and up on the mountains high where the great pines lift their branches in reverence to the sky.

All the crystal streams are swollen, fed by winter's snow and ice. Flowing through the fertile valleys making them a paradise; Hedged by mountains so majestic, kissed each morn by rising sun.

And the western sky is flaming, when the close of day has come.

Klamath is a land of beauty, flowering shrubs and stately pine.

Lakes and rivers, hills and valleys, perfected by the wise design. Pathways winding through the forest, vibrant with the birds refrain.

As they sing their songs of welcome, in these days of early spring.

SEATTLE, April 27 (AP)—Capt. Chris E. Trondsen, veteran of the storm-haunted Alaska shipping route, was "on the beach" today for the second time in his career, his license suspended for eight months by a coast guard board which ruled yesterday he was negligent when the liner Yukon ran aground in Johnstone bay February 4.

Eleven lives were lost before a rescue fleet of coast guard, navy and army craft fought through the storm to reach the stricken vessel and save most of its nearly 500 passengers.
