Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY
SOME time ago, an architect's drawing of the proposed city-county jail was shown on the front page of this newspaper.

Immediately, a subscriber wrote in to complain against expenditure of a considerable sum in construction of this jail when, it was asserted, there is serious need for an adequate recreation center here.

Today, we have another letter along the same line, objecting to building a new jail instead of "using that money for a decent place for children to play or a nice municipal swimming pool."

These comments indicate a need for refreshing memories about this jail project.
On one occasion years ago voters turned down a ballot measure to finance a new jail, and subsequently an effort failed to get federal aid for a jail project.

There then developed a movement for a city-county jail, based on the theory that a joint jail operation would bring law enforcement activities here closer together, eliminate costly duplications, and solve the serious city jail problem.

This plan received public support. The county agreed to go in with the city, with the city furnishing one-third of the cost.

On June 22, 1945, at a special election, the voters of Klamath Falls by a good margin endorsed the plan, by authorizing a levy to produce $50,000 for the city-county jail. It is a three-year levy, still in force.

Hence, it is plain that the public here has officially authorized the jail program, and use of the funds for any other purpose is not in the cards. Furthermore, we feel sure that anyone who investigates the situation will realize the need for a constructive solution of the jail problem here. We are convinced the city-county jail program is sound.

Recreation Project

THIS, however, does not dispose of the argument that there is need for expanded recreation facilities for the youth of Klamath Falls and the surrounding area. It is a separate matter, though the comparison made by our correspondents is apt. A community which can build a good jail should be able to provide adequately for wholesome recreation for its youth.

The movement for a swimming pool and added recreation facilities here is now making headway. Before long, the people who feel so strongly on this matter will undoubtedly have opportunity to support a definite proposal.

STATIC

The Boston Symphony will close its season today with the second movement of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in D Minor. The program will be heard over KFLW at 8:30 tonight. Under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky, the broadcast will have the combined chorus of the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society of which Dr. G. Wallace Woodworth is conductor. The quartette of assisting vocalists will include Frances Yee, soprano; Viola Silvas, alto; Carl McKinley, tenor and Robert McKinnis, bass, all of whom are young American artists.

Sunday's programs will give the music lover two programs, the Ford Sunday Evening Hour and the Stradivari Orchestra. The Ford Hour will include in Springtime, by Goldmark, One Fire Day by Puccini, Procession del Rocio by Turina, Molly on the Shore by Grainger, Les Filles du Cadix by Delibes, Homage by Del Rio, Prelude from "A Cycle of Life" by Ronald, French Folk Song by Gossens, Ava Maria, Bach-Gounod; Dance of the Clowns from Snegurochka, by Rimsky-Korsakov and will conclude with Come Ye Faithful by Sullivan. The Stradivari program will include Waltzes by Jones, Poor Butterfly by Rubbell; Jeannine, I Dream of Lilac Time, Schilkret; Symphony, Friml; Intermezzo, Grandos; Love is a Dancing Thing, Schwartz; March, Tosti; White Hearts Are Singing, O. Strauss, and Dance of the Comedians by Smetana.

Sunday's top line thriller "Counterspy" will this week see David Harding and his men combating a smuggling ring. Along with the run-of-the-mill smuggling and what not, this gang is a murderous bunch of cut-throats. How they are brought to justice makes a thrill packed half hour on Counterspy.

The Theatre Guild on the Air program for Sunday will be Mary of Scotland, by Maxwell Anderson. A drama which depicts the intrigue and deception that was indicative of the English Royalty, the play stars Helen Hayes and Helen Menken, along with Whitford Kane, Alfred Shirley, James Monks, Anne Burr, Anthony Kemble Cooper and Reginald Mason.

The Quiz Kids show will be lived up tomorrow when an ex-quiz kid, Richard Williams, comes back for a repeat performance. Only this time he'll answer the questions and not ask them. Richard did 213 shows over a period of five years before he retired from the board on reaching his 16th birthday.

Bail Set In Theft Case

After a preliminary hearing in justice court this morning, Judge J. A. Mahoney took the larceny case of Martin S. Anderson, charged with theft of $680, under advisement for 48 hours, and set Anderson's bail at $1500 cash.

Anderson is charged with taking the money from a pocketbook belonging to L. L. Young, operator of a restaurant at Crescent, March 18, when he was employed at the cafe.

Young testified this morning that the money and pocketbook were in a pillow in his room. Anderson was ill that morning and Mrs. Young had him go to bed, getting a pillow for him out of Young's room. The money was in that pillow.

Later, when Young missed the money, Anderson was in a pool hall in Crescent where he was heard to say that he had the pocketbook and there was only $100 in it, and that he would give it back to Young.

When Young came in, Anderson gave him back the pocketbook, empty, and also $100. The other $580 has never been located. Deputy Sheriff Raymond W. Oehlerich, who arrested the man, said that he was drunk but that when searched he had only about $27 on him.

Attorney U. S. Balentine, defending Anderson, told the court that there was no evidence of Anderson's taking the money but that it had been accidentally given him in the pillow and that no crime was committed.

$25,000 In For Basin Starch Firm

MERRILL, April 27—Twenty-five thousand dollars of a needed $100,000 have been gathered in escrow, held by the First National bank for the construction of a potato starch and glucose plant in Klamath basin.

The amount now in escrow represents the voluntary deposits of farmers on the basis of information gathered at meetings, through news articles and from circular letters. No personal contact sales effort has been made. The funds were gathered in a period of one week. All Klamath basin banks are cooperating in the fund-gathering effort.

The total jumped to $25,000 last night when 72 potato growers attending a meeting in the Merrill community hall deposited an average $250 each.

Money Held
The escrow money will be held by the bank until $100,000 is gathered or until June 1, if the $100,000 total is not reached. In that case deposits will be refunded to growers.

If the escrow is satisfied before June 1, funds will be turned over to the Northwest Chemurgy Cooperative in exchange for $100 shares of common stock. According to C. W. Prescott, assistant general manager, present at the Merrill meeting, directors of the cooperative have already authorized signature of the agreement to build a Klamath plant in 1946.

Machinery necessary in the Klamath plant is available for purchase at the Laurel Mississippi plant which is now for sale. New machinery is very difficult to obtain, Chemurgy has an option on the Laurel plant machinery. The option expires Tuesday, April 30. Negotiations are in progress for a $65,000 loan to close the purchase prior to expiration of the option. Escrow money is not available for this purpose.

Early plans call for construction of a plant between Hatfield and Merrill on the railroad siding.

Police questioned the two men at the lodge hall and said LaBonde admitted taking the purse. He said he took the money out and tossed the purse on top of a canopy over the building entrance. It was found there. The other man was released.
