

Today's Roundup

THE Marine Barracks is now surplus and the state can negotiate for it for a higher educational set-up.

How favorable a deal for this magnificent property can be had by the state will probably depend on how aggressively and adroitly the state acts.

EPLEY

Senators Cordon and Morse have been especially helpful on the Marine Barracks project, and they will unquestionably continue on that line if given the proper encouragement from the Oregon end.

Present plan is to set up the educational center there as a part of the extension service. If the legislature is called into special session, as is now being considered, it might be possible to provide legislation that would facilitate the establishment of the educational institution at the installation on the hill.

Novel Proposal

THERE is so much talk about under-cover dealings by parking meter salesmen that one is tempted to look suspiciously on anyone who favors the gadgets.

When the hard-boiled gent on the chamber of commerce board of directors yesterday voted to favor meters, however, it is unlikely anybody suspected anybody else of taking cash under the cover.

Recently, when a couple of parking meter representatives visited us (one of them, incidentally, is a state legislator from a neighboring county) we advised them to keep everything aboveboard if they expected to do business here.

All indications are that the salesmen for parking meter companies can make pretty fancy commissions. The chamber directors' idea is that the city can make up its own mind without benefit of salesmen and collect the commission.

Hearing Needed

THE chamber action of yesterday is just one of several such considerations which will be given by various groups to the parking meter proposal.

In addition to the recommendations it gets from groups, the city council should hold an open hearing on the parking meter question before it acts.

We had a telephone call from a local lady yesterday who doesn't like meters, and says so in picturesque fashion. The council should hear people who feel that strongly, on either side, in the consideration of this issue.

Omission

WE have a beef with the American Pioneer Trails association which hasn't anything to do with the proposed name of the old south emigrant road.

The association has put out a map showing important historical spots of Oregon. It shows a lot of them, but it has one extremely serious omission.

It fails to indicate the spot on the west side of Upper Klamath lake where John C. Fremont received the message that turned him back to take a leading part in making California a part of the United States.

STATIC

A wonder "where" and also how, of my own is the question of parking meters. They're as mechanical as a lot of gadgets, and more so than a lot of others, but there seems to be an inexhaustible supply of them.

Maybe if our irons, etc., caused us a lot of worry and trouble and we had to pay every day to keep them up they'd be easier to get.

yesterday—that Fremont moved into the Klamath country from California, then a property of Mexico. He camped on Tule lake that night, calling it Rhett lake in honor of a South Carolina friend.

It was on May 8 and 9 that events occurred on Upper Klamath lake that certainly deserve attention on the Pioneer Trails map.

News Behind The News

WASHINGTON, May 2 — The epochal movement within leftwing labor to shake off the communists is being quietly helped by the White House.

Since Mr. Byrnes firmed his back against further Russian encroachments in world affairs, the more radical CIO-PAC crowd has been arousing criticism against President Truman and the administration.

The latest rousing of criticism got under Mr. Truman's skin, as well as some very high union labor hide. Important labor leadership immediately became involved in an internal conflict, the ramifications of which have not yet been disclosed.

Regardless of these reports, any level eye can plainly see Mr. Hillman is caught in an enigmatic whirlwind. If he lets the communists go, he may lose his organization; if he keeps them, the organization may crack.

I would not be surprised if the White House aided in the cracking, strange as this may sound. Latest appointments of an undersecretary and three assistants in the labor department went the AFL way.

BOYLE'S NOTEBOOK

COBURG, Germany, May 2 (P)—This well-spring of nazism wants to redeem its good name by organizing an "international academy for agreement among the nations" where students from all over the world can study democracy.

It is a strange thing—this mass repentance by a city for past national-socialist sins. "It is believed only in Germany."

Coburg for centuries was the dual seat of the Saxe-Coburg Hesse rulers, a prolific royal family which produced kings for several European countries.

HIGH SCHOOL News Notes and Comment

By JOAN O'NEILL

The Elks annual high school formal was very nice last night. For the past four years this lodge has been honoring high school students with a formal dance and free refreshments.

Ted Reeves, Carmen Lee Jones, Joan Albee, and Andy Moore were the student committee for this dance. Mary Vandenberg represented the Sacred Heart academy.

Ten of this year's juniors are graduating this spring with the class of '46. Marian Baker, Marilyn Bruce, Audrey Lilly, Dennis Knowles, Merry McKeon, Marian Mills, Yvonne Pitcher, Nellie Tennesson, Malcolm Van Meter, and Dennis Knowles will be walking with the graduating class on the 22nd.

The senior banquet is scheduled for next Wednesday evening at 6:30 in the KUHS cafeteria. Senior teachers have been collecting 50 cents from each senior for the affair.

Senior girls are beginning to register for the annual AAUW senior girls' tea which is given each spring in honor of the graduating class. This year the tea is to be held at the home of Mrs. Clarence Humble.

The Hi-Y had a hayride recently for the members and their guests. Soloists and members of the girls' quartet left today for Eugene for the national music contest.

Dean Maris, dean of women at Oregon State college, spoke to the seniors yesterday morning. Her topic was "Pursuit of Happiness." Her talk was very well received by most of the seniors.

The gravity ditches in this community began filling with water last week, to the great satisfaction of those residents who use them, due to the fact that we have not had rain for a month.

Midland residents who wish the bus service sent out by the Church of God, can now have it by being at the store Sunday morning at 9:30. It is a service to take anyone who wishes to attend Sunday school.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Schmeck have moved into the new house belonging to Fred Milani. Schmeck sold his ranch to the Noel brothers who moved on it last week.

Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Hauck went over to Ashland to move his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jake Hauck to a small residence near the fork from a small farm near Ashland.
