Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY
KLAMATH FALLS has been named by the veterans administration as the site for a new VA hospital in Southern Oregon...

EPLEY

Klamath sources inquired about the intention of the VA, and Congressman Lowell Stockman reported he was told Klamath Falls meant Klamath Falls in the VA announcement.

Camp White Out

MEDFORD and nearby communities at the outset made a strong play on the use of the Camp White hospital for a VA establishment, pointing out it was already constructed at a large cost and could be quickly converted.

Indications are that the same answer has been given in both cases: The VA is not interested in taking over second hand establishments.

KF Has Edge

THE Rogue contingent's efforts, however, extend beyond the Camp White hospital proposal. If there is to be a brand new hospital, as is evidently the case, they want it over there instead of at Klamath Falls.

The M-T says that local veterans, who conferred with Engineer L. A. Warren and other members of the site board, were told that "Klamath Falls has the edge on this (Medford) area because that community (KF) got its bid in first."

Quoting from the M-T story: "In Washington, the Veterans administration looked upon Klamath Falls as a center of population in southern Oregon, the inspectors told the veterans. The impression was gained because of Klamath Falls better railroad facilities..."

Endeavoring to correct the impression the local men informed the inspectors that 80 per cent of the southern Oregon population is in the region from Medford to the coast, that there are 60 per cent more doctors in Jackson county than in Klamath Falls and that the altitude in Klamath Falls is too high for treatment of heart and nerve disabilities, main ailments of disabled vets of this region.

Busy

IT will be seen from this news report that the Rogue valley forces are quite busy in a determined effort to alter the announced decision of the VA to build the hospital here.

Klamath's information in support of the location of a hospital here was contained in a brief prepared by Charles Stark, manager of the chamber of commerce, and is complete and accurate.

The VA knows of the medical success of the Marine Barracks and is undoubtedly otherwise well informed about Klamath Falls. However, it is well for people here to know of the Rogue contentions and intentions, and to maintain contact with the proper authorities in this matter.

STATIC

Maybe it would be the spring in the air, and maybe it would be just a simple case of childhood memories carrying over, but that little squib in the Herald last night that said that all circus trains had been cancelled brought a tear to many an eye.

ABC-KFLW's "Town Meeting of the Air" for Thursday night will bring up for discussion the problem "Should OPA Be Continued Without Restrictions?" Speakers for the affirmative will be Leon Henderson, former director of WASHINGTON, May 7.—The senate debate on the proposed loan to Britain has conspicuously ducked the fact that the British government is lavishly buying its way into socialism. Some of the senate newsmen, who are the senator's severest critics, attribute the void to the broad lack of knowledge among politicians of financial matters. They should charge it, instead, to the masking operations of the Attlee government. Not even the most learned financial authorities of the empire can ascertain how the Attlee treasury has taken over the Bank of England and the mines, or how it is proceeding now to take the cable and wireless companies, railroads, steel and whatnot. The operations have been covered with secrecy and confusion worthy of an Eisenhower invasion of Europe, in which false moves and rumors were used to conceal the real intent from the enemy. Yet sufficient general evidence is available in the government bills proposed in parliament to piece together a general outline of the scheme. Each industry is being seized in a slightly different way. The government has steadfastly refused to announce a general policy. But the actions taken so far, warrant these following conclusions: The government is buying its nation with debt. It is purchasing industries by offering government stock or securities to private owners for their private stock and securities. The price paid is rarely divulged, but seems generally to be the current market value, or better.

Advice Of Times THE London Times (April 29) analyzed the processes so far in an effort to offer some worthwhile advice to holders of railroad securities who may be next, and reached this conclusion: "whatever method of nationalization is adopted, railroad stocks should be retained." In short, the Times concludes the government will offer at least the current market value or better for the railroads.

Only in the taking of the Bank of England, did the government tell what it was really offering. Then it gave a 3 per cent government bond for stock, but guaranteed dividends until 1966 equal to what the bank had paid in the past 20 years. In the seizure of the coal industry alone, did the treasury permit free sale of its substitute stock (There is a big debt in coal and operations have not been profitable.) So the general conclusion is inescapable that the socialism of Britain represents the government issuing stock to the same people who held the private stock, at market prices, often promising them the same dividends, and in effect guaranteeing them against losses, while depriving them of influence in operations or the right to sell their stock.

This is an expensive operation. In effect, it transfers the debts of industry from private ownership to the people as a whole, making the treasury liable for success of the enterprises, atop all the war debts.

How will it work out? Not a man alive can guess. Offhand you might reasonably conclude that if the industrial operations continue profitable, the government may pay off in 20 to 25 years as contemplated. If business becomes unprofitable, the people in their taxes, will have to foot the bill—as well as the American taxpayers who are furnishing this proposed loan. Furthermore, it may be difficult for a labor government to promote profitable operations because such a government must be amenable politically to wage increases and increased operating costs for public service.

Can Do Anything

BUT these simplest truths may not stand the test of time, because government can do anything. As it has let money rot, it can allow its special securities for each of these industries in years ahead to find levels less burdensome upon the treasury. Only imaginations unlimited can possibly conjure the limitless possibilities. Mr. Attlee's arrangers are keeping things that way. In the cables and wireless bill, there is no clear indication of prices to be paid for the involved holding company stocks. Apparently price is to be established by private bargaining between the treasury and holders of the stock.

Yet these astonishing and perplexing developments in socialism have caused remarkably little interest among the plegmatic British. The public likes to look at the surface of things (indeed has no opportunity to do otherwise in this instance) and on the surface, fair exchange seems to be no robbery. What difference does it make if the stockholders get a government security of the same value and interest rate for their private stock? So go the British.

The best commentary is offered by one of the personal items on the front page of the Times. Before the war this classified column was studded with such interesting items as: "Kitty. Please meet me at the usual place. Don't fail. I still love." There have been none of these notes lately, but many ads like the one which offered for sale a genuine pre-war leather golf bag for "20 pounds or any offer." Imagine it! A second-hand golf bag offered for $80 . . . or anything.

OPA and chief economist for the research institute of America, and William H. Joyce Jr., shoe manufacturer of Pasadena. For the negative Senator W. Lee O'Daniel, democrat of Texas and member of the senate commerce committee and well known radio commentator, Fulton Lewis.

KFLW springs from the track field to an invasion of the squared circle tonight when Sportscenter Don Neal gives a blow by blow description from ringside of Klamath's first box-

"Yes, I guess your husband does like his new secretary, but I hear she doesn't care much about him!"

MIDLAND EMPIRE NEWS

Chiloquin

CHILOQUIN, May 6.—When S/2c James Wampler, '45 graduate of Chiloquin high school, returned from a weekend visiting parents and friends here to his base at Alameda, Calif., he found himself advanced to S/1c and assigned to immediate duty at Long Beach naval base. The young yeoman is feeling mighty lucky, for only one other man was sent to Long Beach. The rest of the new yeoman were assigned to New Orleans and Alaska.

James is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wampler, ranchers of the Port Klamath district.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Blocklinger of Chiloquin drove their daughter, Sally, back to Dominican convent, San Rafael, last week. They remained several days in San Francisco on business, returning the middle of this week. Sally had been here for Easter vacation.

Mrs. Daisy Stone and Mrs. Bobbie Simmers were in Chiloquin last Thursday. They came down from Chiloquin Lumber company's woods camp to bring back little Diane Kircher, who has been visiting Mrs. Stone since last Sunday.

Elmer Heglund of Chiloquin has come from Kirk, where he is an operator for the Southern Pacific. He is suffering from high blood pressure and may need hospital care.

Chiloquin Box and Lumber company lost part of its smoke stack in the big wind last week. The whole stack will be replaced soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Gienger had as guests this past week, Mr. and Mrs. Darrill Evans and Mrs. Robert Johnson, all of The Dalles. The northern people were members of an ebullient party last fall with Mr. and Mrs. Gienger.

Miss Ruth Snody of Eugene visited her aunt, Mrs. Leroy Gienger, and family, for several days this week. Miss Snody was recently released from the Spars and was on her way to San Francisco.

ing match in a long time. Assisting Don will be Mel Baldwin, who will handle the between the rounds pater, and Gib Walters, who will see to the engineering needs of the broadcast. The broadcast is a further extension of KFLW's policy of bringing to the people of Klamath all the sporting events worthy of description, and all that we can get facilities for. The broadcast will open at 9:30 and carry through the main events, going off at 10:30.

Looks like the parking meter question will ride on and on and on. Last night's council meeting ran into another stone wall on the question, along with the merchants association representatives who would like to club the measure. Progress, in either direction, can be a long and weary process.

HARLAN, Ky., May 7 (AP)—One man was killed and at least six others were wounded in an early morning gun battle today between Progressive Mine Workers and United Mine Workers at the International Harvester company's captive coal mine at nearby Benham. Today's outburst, starting about 5:15 a. m. (CDT) and lasting about 15 minutes, was the first reported in the southeastern Kentucky coal field since the nationwide UMW strike started April 1. Forty of Harlan county's 41 mines operate under UMW contract. Sheriff Cawood said there had been no arrests, so far as he knew, and the Benham police department reported no arrests. The Benham mine, employing about 500 men and adjoining the UMW mine of the U. S. Coal and Coke company at Lynch, continued to operate "as usual," officials there reported.
