

B. C. Logger Strike Perils Newspapers, Hits Fishing

VICTORIA, B. C., May 17 (AP)—A logger's strike which took 37,000 workers off the job in British Columbia yesterday threatened to close mills producing newsprint for many large United States newspapers within a month and curtail fishing operations.

Spokesmen at the Powell River Paper company in Vancouver would say only that the strike "ultimately" would affect production, but other sources said the pulp mills had about three weeks' supply of logs on hand. The province produces about 1000 tons of newsprint daily.

Idleness for 10,000 in the fishing industry was in prospect unless orders for 3,500,000 boxes could be filled. Labor leaders said the strike was the opening gun in a general drive for wage increases and predicted that 80,000 would be out of work in a week or 10 days.

The International Woodworkers of America (CIO) originally demanded a wage boost of 25 cents an hour and went on strike when their offer to cut that to 18 cents was refused. Operators had offered 123 cents. The length of the work week and other considerations also were in dispute.

An effort to compel mediation under wartime labor laws was made by Chief Justice Gordon Sloan of the British Columbia supreme court, who recommended such action to the labor ministry in Ottawa.

Historians Get Trail Name Row

PORTLAND, May 17 (AP)—The state highway commission opened bids on eight projects today and referred a controversy over the name of a pioneer route to the Oregon Historical society.

In The Day's News

WATCH India in the news.

Something BIG is possibly in the making there. A BRITISH commission, composed of three cabinet members, is apparently offering INDEPENDENCE to India on a silver platter. They seem to MEAN BUSINESS.

This British cabinet mission is proposing for India a federal union, somewhat on the pattern of our federal government, but with this difference: In between the federal congress for the whole country (such as our congress in Washington) and the provincial bodies (such as our state legislatures) there is to be a REGIONAL legislature (as if Oregon, Washington and California should join in a legislative body representing all three states).

The idea back of this regional innovation is to provide protection for the Moslems, who are in the minority in India, against the Hindus, who are strongly in the majority.

Chiloquin

The student body of Chiloquin high school met last week to elect officers for the 1946-47 school term. Elected were Remo Minato, president; Ann McKell, vice president; Mary Monks, secretary; Jack Jones, treasurer, and Ray Severson, sergeant-at-arms. Mielcha Mathis will be parliamentarian.

Mrs. Arthur F. Blocklinger spent Mother's Day weekend in Eugene with her daughter, Mary Alice, who is a student at the University of Oregon.

Donna Brautacht, member of the graduating class at Chiloquin high school, was able to join her classmates at the baccalaureate service held Sunday in the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel. Donna has been ill with virus pneumonia.

When everyone else in Chiloquin is yawning with spring fever, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Gruberman reach for knapsacks and skis and go mountain climbing. Last Sunday they tackled Mt. Scott, but found it tough going.

They left their car at Pot Hole camp and climbed eight miles before Mr. Gruberman decided that the trip back would be enough for her. Gruberman managed to reach timberline, but the climb had taken so long he was forced to turn back there. The trip was made difficult by alternate patches of snow and bare ground, necessitating constant putting on and taking off of skis.

Shooting begins at 10 a.m. The association has installed two new traps with cement walks for the shooters, and can accommodate 60 firers an hour. The trap ground is located in the area of the now-closed WRA center and has been out of operation since the Jap camp was built.

Bernard C. Schultz is at present president of the sportsmen's association, but membership of the group is to be rebuilt and new officers chosen soon.

O'Connor Plant To Be Rebuilt

(Continued from Page One) or it might be two, before he could get material and labor to put his plant back in operation but it was his intention to rebuild. All stock, now on range in California, will be fattened there and shipped elsewhere for finishing, probably in the Sacramento valley.

Origin of the blaze, which apparently started in a feeding shed across from the tallow plant operated by Johnson Packing company at about 1:45 p. m., was still undetermined, O'Connor said. It was discovered first by James Young, Johnson employee, who said yesterday that when he first noticed the fire it had progressed almost 100 feet. Young said he and another Johnson worker, Vernon Rentele, a utility man employed at the tallow plant, grabbed a hose and tried to put out the fire but to no avail. They then called for help but a brisk wind blowing to the south fanned the flames and they spread into the huge sheds which covered hundreds of tons of hay.

Cattle On Range

The warehouse where the fire started was not occupied, O'Connor said the shed was used to feed lambs for finishing and last winter he fed over 8000, winter before last, 11,000. Connecting to this shed is another in which O'Connor fed 500 cattle last winter. They are now on range.

Lost in the flames were 30 head of hogs and one steer which was awaiting slaughter. Some 400 tons of hay in two separate sheds, and one big pile of straw used for bedding and estimated at 100 tons, were also burned.

The hay came from O'Connor's Spring Lake ranch and this year's crop will have to be handled in some way, the owner said, and would probably necessitate building at least one

Two Buildings

Two buildings on the 120-acre plant were saved from the flames which were carried away from the structures by the wind. These included the big feed mill of tile and sheet metal construction, and the grinder shed where the hay is conveyed into the hammermill.

O'Connor said he first saw the smoke from his plant when he was about 12 miles south at Lower Klamath lake where he has a crew shearing sheep. He was en route from Maxwell north and thought he would check on the shearing before coming on to Klamath Falls. O'Connor said that his original thought was that the smoke came from his home place at Spring Lake and he hurried to the plant to investigate. The plant, in O'Connor's absence, is operated by his two sons, Dan and Jackie, and by his daughter and her husband, Mary and Neal Hurlley. Insurance adjusters were expected here Sunday to adjust the loss.
