announcement that he intends to seek approval soon of a regular department with cabinet status for the government's welfare activities.

The initial reaction of lawmakers was that the reorganization plans probably would keep congress in session until mid-July. The law provides that such plans become effective after 60 calendar days, provided congress remains in session and adopts no resolution disapproving them.

The most important of the streamlining moves proposed by Mr. Truman is the consolidation of the government's numerous welfare activities in the federal security agency, which he hopes to raise to cabinet rank.

Permanent Housing Agency
The chief executive also announced a permanent status for the national housing agency, originally a wartime setup, and listed a number of other lesser changes, most of them currently in effect under temporary wartime legislation.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley told a reporter that submission of the plans after the president's news conference yesterday made it practically certain that congress would not quit before the middle of July. He added there was very little hope of getting through before then anyway, at the rate necessary legislation is progressing.
