

Three Month Delay Seen In Industrial Products As Result Of Shutdowns

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP)—That new car and new refrigerator are three months farther away from the average American family today, the government estimates, because of the coal strike and other strikes.

This report on the outlook was issued by John D. Small, civilian production administrator, who recently urged that congress prohibit strikes for six months to let reconversion sprint instead of hobble.

Despite reconversion's stop-and-go progress, Small's monthly production survey revealed, industry in April set new marks for consumer goods production—record highs for washing machines, men's suits, vacuum cleaners and electric irons, and postwar records for a dozen other scarce items.

But this, he pointed out, occurred before effects of the coal strike were felt. That stoppage, he said, cost the country $2,000,000 worth of production and the economy will "bear the scars . . . for many months to come."

Strike Hikes Prices

The pressure toward higher prices also was intensified by the coal shutdown, according to OPA Administrator Paul A. Porter, in another statement issued last night.

It has "delayed the time in a number of cases at which price ceilings can safely be removed," Porter declared, and was "extremely costly to the stabilization program."

Even if strikes disappear quickly from the industrial picture, Small foresees another check to production developing in the closing months of the year when he said a "severe" manpower shortage is likely.

Reporting on strikes during the first four months of the year, he reported they had cost more than 100,000 jobs, "that even before in the country's history."

Yet employment climbed in April to 54,800,000 and the number of jobless began to drop for the first time since the war's end. Previously unemployment had climbed along with employment, because industry could not absorb men released from the armed forces.

Full Employment Possible

"Should employment rise another 2,500,000 this year—and such a rise seems certain . . . employment will hit the 57,000,000 mark, defined in some quarters as 'full employment for the postwar transition period,'" the OPA administrator predicted.

There were 360,000 fewer persons unemployed in April than in March, cutting the jobless total to 2,335,000. Small said, but this again was before the coal strike and starvation began closing mills and factories.

"Discussing strike effects, the CPA chief reported that 'perishable crops will be lost due to a shortage of both glass containers and tin cans' and that important efforts like the veterans' housing drive and the famine relief program have been set back seriously."

"The production of durable goods including automobiles, has been set back at least three months by the coal strike, combined with other strikes," his report said.

Pastors

Rev. and Mrs. James L. Walker, pastors supplying the pulpit at the Church of the Nazarene during the absence of the regular pastor, Rev. Howard Lane, extend a cordial invitation to all to attend services Sunday.

The Rev. Mr. Lane is expected to return sometime in August.

Zion Lutheran Gets Addition

Word received from the civilian production administration today announces that the application of Zion Lutheran church, 1025 High, to begin construction on a $30,000 addition to its church facilities on the corner of 11th and High, has been approved. The plans for Zion's new church building have been prepared by Roy B. Schonewill of Eugene, Ore.

The construction throughout will be of native stone, both in the interests of durability and beauty, and also to conserve critical building materials. The new church plant will include adequate worship, educational and social facilities of modern design, and construction.

The Rev. Victor A. Schulze, pastor of Zion Lutheran church, stated that the date for the ground-breaking ceremonies had not yet been fixed, but that the congregation was very much in need of these additional new facilities, and that the building committee, composed of the following members of Zion congregation, F. W. Eberlein, F. A. Ohlemeyer, H. Altman, H. Eberlein, and W. Ronfeld, were anxious to get construction underway as soon as possible.

Congregationalists To Hear Matthews

Sunday morning at the Congregational church, Garden near Martin, Rev. Godfrey Matthews will conduct the service preaching a sermon entitled "The Beloved Community." The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed and all members and adherents of the congregation are urged to make every effort to be present. The service begins promptly at 11. The choir, directed by Mrs. Marie Wright Casjens, will sing the communion anthem "And Now, O Master, Mindful of the Love" (Monk).

"Comrades of the Way," the high school young people's group, are now on summer schedule and will meet when called by the president, Mary Griffiths.

Extension Group Plans Trip To OSC

Members of the Klamath county home extension committee plan to attend the June 11 and 12 annual meeting of the Oregon home economics extension council, scheduled to be held at Oregon State college, according to Mrs. Winnifred K. Gillen, county home demonstration agent. Delegates and council alumnae from counties all over the state are expected to swell the number in attendance to approximately 100, and among them will be Mrs. E. E. Kilpatrick of Merrill, who is second vice president of the state group and a former member of the county council.

Other Klamath county representatives on the state council are Mrs. Dave Campbell, Bly; Mrs. W. M. Williams, Henley; Mrs. Lee Holliday, Fairhaven; Mrs. Ray Loosley, Fort Klamath; Mrs. Wes Harey, Altamont; Mrs. Harry Mitchell, Hain; Mrs. Henry Schmor, Bonanza; Mrs. C. E. McClellan, Shasta; Mrs. Earl Mack, Henley, and Mrs. W. S. Metter, Altamont.

The program at the meeting of the state council will include an explanation of plans for building a woman's cooperative house on the Oregon State college campus. This living group will presumably house women enrolled in home economics of this committee.

Two $25 scholarships will be given to outstanding junior or senior women in home economics for high scholarship, who are working their way through school.

The research committee of the council will report on efforts made in the study of faulty nutrition as a possible cause of tooth decay. Funds for this research were made available by legislation last year, partly through the efforts of the state home economics extension council.

The group will also discuss the year's program for its part in the work of the Association of County Women of the World, an international association devoted to spreading understanding among rural women.

Lutherans Give 'King Of Kings'

Zion Lutheran church is showing the religious sound film, "King of Kings," in its church auditorium, 1025 High street, on Sunday evening, June 2. There will be two showings of this film on Sunday evening, the first beginning at 6:30 o'clock, and the second at 8:15 o'clock.

"King of Kings," produced by Cecil B. DeMille, is a film that recreates the life and death of Christ. The sense of reality—of actually being present—is intensified by the absence of spoken dialogue. The printed titles are quotations from the Gospels. Specially composed music establishes suitable atmosphere and mood as the story progresses.

This film, "King of Kings," is the second in a planned series of films to aid the visual education program of the church. The First Christian Church, Ninth and Pine streets, which is also participating in this visual education program will have a showing of this film, "King of Kings," in its church auditorium on Monday evening, June 3, beginning at 8:15 o'clock. The running time of this film is approximately an hour and three quarters. There will be no admission charge. The public is cordially invited to attend.

The service, which climaxed more than a year's weekly Youth for Christ meetings here, was attended mostly by young people.
