

Lumber Supply May Be Eased

Farmers may find a ray of hope for more lumber as the result of recent action taken by the civilian production administration. The actions are:

1. Instructions to CIA field offices to cut down two-thirds on the amount of lumber approved for uses other than in housing and farm construction.
2. Twenty-five per cent of a distributor's regular monthly supply of lumber must now be held for uses without priority ratings as well as all lumber a distributor may get above his regular certified amounts. Distributors also must release their reserve lumber at the end of the month it is received, rather than wait 60 days as previously required.

Before this, lumber distributors could hold all their supplies for priority sales, making it difficult to get lumber even for small repair jobs on the farm. Immediate effect of the changes should be to release for sale without priority all the lumber the yards received prior to June 1—except that which is obligated to those holding certificates.

Huge lumber demands, including requirements for veterans housing, together with production difficulties, are listed as reasons for the lumber squeeze by John D. Small, administrator of CPA. Total requirements for 1946, he said, are figured at more than 36 billion board feet—some 20 per cent more than the estimated supply.

Prizes Offered For Best Malt

In order to encourage the production of better malting barley and to develop suitable pure strains of such barley in the three Northwestern states, competitive prizes are being offered for the best barley exhibited at the Pacific International Livestock show at Portland.

Great Western Malting Co., Inc., cooperating with the Washington Brewers Institute, Inc., and the Brewers Institute of Oregon, Inc., is offering prizes for malting barley in the following classes: two-row barley from Klamath Falls and Tulelake areas; barley from Willamette valley and tributaries; from eastern Washington, eastern Oregon and Idaho; and six-row barley from Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

First and second prizes of $250 and $100 being offered in each class are separate from any premium which may be offered by the Pacific International Livestock show. All entries are to be exhibited and judged at the show which is tentatively set for October 5 to 12. Entries must be received at the show not later than October 5. If the livestock show is not held, this competition will be conducted elsewhere.

Each entry from Klamath county must be accompanied by a certificate issued by the county AAA committee to certify that the exhibit represents the product of not less than 20 acres of barley grown by the exhibitor. Each entry should be at least one 100-pound grain sack of barley. Only one entry of each type may be submitted from a farm.

In submitting an entry the exhibitor will agree to give the Great Western Malting Co., Inc., an option to buy his crop at the market plus suitable premium for seed. The company will return the barley purchased to that particular area in which it was produced for seed.

Judges will be from Washington, Oregon, and Idaho state departments of agriculture, the United States department of agriculture, Washington and Oregon state colleges and the University of Idaho.

SIX PINTS IS NORMAL. Our lungs hold approximately 10 pints of air when we take a deep breath. Normally, however, they hold about six pints. One pint is breathed in and out every time we take a breath.

Herds And Flocks Culled To Meet Grain Shortages

Klamath county FSA farmers are culling dairy herds and poultry flocks and changing feed practices to weather critical feed grain shortages, according to Harry E. Clark, Klamath county farm security supervisor. Everything possible is being done to avoid selling foundation herds or flocks due to lack of feed grain.

"Most dairymen hope to meet the emergency feed situation through reducing grain to a minimum and replacing it temporarily with improved pasture and legume hays where necessary," Clark said. Even though production is reduced, every effort is being made to retain foundation herds without permanent injury. Some herds are being placed on test so that low producing "star boarders" can be culled out, saving additional grain.

Farm poultry flocks, which represent about three-fourths of all hens, can be heavily culled in most cases without a serious drop in egg lay, it was pointed out. Culling out slow-maturing pullets and hens that start going "broody" early is standard practice in commercial flocks and is a good way to provide more chicken dinners on the farm. Good pullet range and avoiding common over-feeding of scratch grain is also helping save grain.

"Borrowers generally recognize that feeding hogs and stock too heavy weights is unprofitable and wastes grain because costs of putting on fat increases as the animal matures," Clark said. "Pigs can make good gains with little grain if they have good alfalfa and legume pasture available. Grain for fattening spring litters should be forthcoming this fall."

Keeping feed bins in good repair and having a program of rat control are other practical ways of meeting current feed shortages.

Carol Drake tells how to conserve on bread

The Famine Emergency Committee has asked Americans to cooperate during the present food emergency to conserve bread so that starving people in other lands may be fed. We offer in the following suggestions ways to save precious bread.

TO KEEP YOUR BREAD FRESH—Open the wrapper at one end of the loaf only. Remove the heel, take out only the slices needed, replace the heel, and fold over waxed paper.

TO FRESHEN DRY BREAD—If your bread becomes slightly dry, sprinkle the wrapper around the bread with water or put the bread in a paper sack and sprinkle. Place in a moderate oven (350° F.) for about 10 minutes or until bread is heated through. Serve immediately for a homemade-bread flavor.

WHEN YOU HAVE LEFTOVER BREAD—Don't throw it away. Use it in one of the following ways to augment your regular bread supply.

Melba Toast—Use leftover sliced bread. Place on a baking sheet in a single layer and dry out in slow oven (250° F.) about 1½ hours or until a tempting tawny brown. Store in an airtight container and use as needed. Use in place of bread for breakfast, lunch, dinner or as a snack.

Note: Slice leftover hard rolls and use in the same way.

Bread Crumbs—Dry out but do not brown leftover bread, trimmings, crusts, and heels in slow oven (350° F.) for about 15 minutes or use already dry bread. Then roll, crush or grind into fine crumbs. Store in airtight container and use as needed. Use crumbs for scalloped dishes, for coating food, in puddings, or substitute for half the flour in waffle, pancake, muffin or other quick bread recipes.
