

Widening Of South Sixth Going Ahead On Schedule

The South Sixth street widening program is progressing according to schedule, with only minor delays holding up work at present.

Officials of the California Oregon Power company report that they can finish their construction work in 30 to 60 days if they can secure right-of-way and the necessary material. Already they have laid a portion of the high tension wires along Summers lane, and the 66,000-volt high tension circuit along Sixth has been taken down and all distribution poles are being rebuilt.

A 12-inch water main will be installed from the easterly end of the viaduct to Altamont drive along the south side of Sixth and a 6-inch main is going in from Altamont drive to Summers lane.

Other mains to be installed will include an 8-inch main from the viaduct to Shasta way and a 4-inch main from Shasta way to Washburn drive.

Copco officials say that work can be finished in a short time if the right-of-way is established. There are still several buildings to be moved, which is holding up work. A shortage of house movers is named as the reason for the delay.

Cable Needed

Approximately 7000 feet of underground conduit has been laid by the telephone company along Sixth street, but as yet the company has been unable to acquire the necessary cable. Company officials also name a 30 to 60-day period for completion of work once the necessary materials are at hand.

Phone service will not be interrupted at any time, but it is hoped that the underground cable will arrive before the present posts have to be moved in connection with the physical widening of the street.

Some 2000 feet of underground sewer has been laid by Harry Hamilton, subcontractor, along the Sixth street route. Warren Northwest, contractor, reports that about 80 per cent of the clearing and grubbing of trees along the right of way has been completed.

There still remains pre-construction work to be done, but work on the street will start soon, and highway officials say that South Sixth will be tied up for several months after construction begins. One lane of traffic will be kept open at all times, but this will probably be inadequate to handle the normal flow of traffic.

Starch Plant Site Selected

TULELAKE, June 22—The location of the Northwest Chemurgy cooperative starch factory has been definitely settled with the purchase of a potato cellar owned by G. W. Osborn and son. The cellar, situated east of the Southern Pacific tracks at Hatfield, is 300 feet long and above ground.

Three carloads of machinery have already been unloaded at the cellar. The machinery was brought from a government-owned starch plant in Laurel, Miss. Although it was installed in a factory there for the processing of sweet potatoes, it was never used.

Construction is expected to get underway by the first of next week, and they plan to be in operation in time for the potato crop. Clarence Rice of Wenatchee, Wash., is in charge of the construction.

When complete the factory will be on a 24-hour schedule and 25 men will be employed. Besides additional remodeling, it is probable that glucose machinery will be added to the factory before winter.

Approximately $100,000 for construction was raised by farmers before June 1.

Housing Authorities Denounce Rent Order

PORTLAND, Ore., June 22 (AP)—Housing authority commissioners of Portland, Clackamas county, Ore., and Clark county, Wash., said today that a federal public housing authority rent order is unfair and they will not follow it.

The order provides for adjusting rents on the basis of income. This, the commissioners said, would be unfair to low-income families unable to get space in public housing projects and would tend to make all temporary housing low-rent and permanent. They agreed, however, that it was proper to adjust rents on an income basis for veterans and welfare cases.

Industrialization Of China Favored

PORTLAND, June 22 (AP)—China should industrialize under management of her own citizens, even if the capital is borrowed from the United States or private investors, the Northwest Institute of International Relations was told yesterday.

Dr. C. K. Yang of the University of Washington declared the postwar rush of foreign firms to establish plants in China was "ominous." That nation suffers if foreign investors control her factories and take away the profit, he said.

Vanishing House

STEVENS POINT, Wis., June 22 (AP)—R. B. Lewis, county welfare director, sold a seven-room house, but when the purchaser went to move in the house was gone.

"We finally found it piled up on a lot 20 miles away in the next county," Lewis said. "Someone dismantled and moved it."

Governor Bags Star

Susan Hayward, titian-haired star of the Oregon pioneer epic "Canyon Passage," who has informed Governor Snell she will be present in person for the grand premiere in Portland on July 13.

Susan Hayward To Attend 'Canyon Passage' Opening

A high spot was reached at the world premiere headquarters of "Canyon Passage" when word came from Governor Earl Snell that titian-haired Susan Hayward, feminine star of the Oregon-written, Oregon-produced technicolor epic of early pioneer era, had been committed to be present for the opening day ceremonies at Portland, July 13.

The lovely Susan, who once said that she was just a city girl with no desire to become "countertified," now admits that since experiencing her 1100-mile jaunt from Universal studios to location amid the scenic beauties of southern Oregon where the picture was filmed, that life in the open country has its good points, for even a movie star.

Daily dips in the frigid waters of Diamond lake and an 18-mile horseback ride to nearby Mt. Bailey, where she caught her first trout, has the Brooklyn-born actress completely sold on the beauties of the state.

When informed by producer Walter Wanger that current picture schedules would be altered to permit her to join the entourage of other celebrities who will make the five-hour plane trip to Portland, Miss Hayward became enthusiastic, adding the remark that if time permitted, she would like to try her hand angling for salmon in the Columbia.

The Oregon Advertising club, sponsors of the premiere, are making elaborate preparations to extend a real Oregon welcome to the star and the two-score and more featured writers and columnists who are expected to accompany her on the flight north.

Mosquito Control Legislation Asked

PORTLAND, Ore., June 22 (AP)—Oregon and Washington should pass legislation for cooperative control of mosquitoes, federal and state entomologists, county and city officials agreed at a meeting here yesterday.

The insect long has been a problem in Multnomah and nearby Oregon counties and Clark and Skamania counties, Wash. Frank L. Shull, chairman of the board of Multnomah county commissioners, said failure of other counties to cooperate nullified control work in Multnomah county.

Barge Traffic Heavy On Upper Columbia

LEWISTON, Ida., June 22 (AP)—The upper Columbia river is teeming with barge traffic and engineers are well along with their preliminary exploration work for Snake river navigation-power dams, Homer H. Lipps reported yesterday upon returning from an inspection trip to The Dalles, Ore., with a group of army engineers.

Two diamond drill barges are working in the lower reaches of the Snake, bringing up core samples of the bedrock at the various dam sites, Lipps reported.

'Illegal Contract' Balks Shasta View Irrigators

Difficulties between the Shasta View irrigation district and the reclamation bureau were brought to public attention again yesterday by an advertisement inserted in The Herald and News charging the bureau with "black marketing" water.

The Shasta View board claimed the bureau had served notice it would not provide water for lands of the district after June 24. This, the advertisement charged, was due to the fact that the district had refused to sign an "illegal contract" offered it by the reclamation bureau.

E. L. Stephens, reclamation superintendent, said today that there has been no refusal to serve lands of the district with water as of June 24.

Instead, he said, he has informed district officials that as of that date, the landholders will be expected to pay rental for water they have received and to make current payments before receiving further water. He denied that this could be interpreted as a refusal to deliver water.

Stephens said that the bureau is not dealing with the Shasta View as a district, there being no new contract as yet between them, but deals with individual landowners on a rental basis. He said that there is no discrimination between these landholders and others in a similar status.

Shasta View became inactive a few years ago, but was recently reactivated as a district and A. M. Thomas is its managing representative. It is a "pumping district" as contrasted with areas served by gravity flow.

The board claims that there is no contract as yet between the district and the bureau because the contract offered is unsatisfactory. It charges that the contract contains provisions with respect to excess water charged and other matters which are illegal under law as interpreted by the U. S. supreme court. The excess water charge issue is an old one here, with farmers and farm groups generally contending that the bureau has no right to charge for water above any arbitrarily established amount. "Beneficial use" should be the only measurement, they argue.

It is understood the district takes the position that until the contract issue is settled, it should not be required to make payments.

It has been indicated that the Shasta View contract issue, as well as the question of excess water charges, may be left in abeyance pending the outcome of a comprehensive investigation of the Klamath region by the reclamation bureau, which is now getting under way.

Portland Lad Wins Air Trip

Jack Stanley, a 12-year-old Portland boy, arrived in Klamath Falls yesterday on the first lap of a 600-mile airplane trip which he won as first prize for naming a new Piper Cub airplane during a nationwide contest sponsored jointly by Piper Cub, Inc., and General Mills.

Stanley, the state winner, named the plane "Airmonger."

Receiving his choice of where he wanted to go, Jackie chose the southern part of the state. Jackie arrived in a Super Cruiser Piper Cub flown by Henry Troh, of Portland. Also along on the trip was Ann Sullivan, writer for the Oregonian.

They have taken in Crater lake from the air, from there went to Medford. From there they will return to Portland. Stanley is a student in the eighth grade.

More Relief Feed On Hand

SPOKANE, June 22 (AP)—Nineteen more cars of relief feed are ready for delivery to poultrymen, the state production and marketing administration said yesterday, with 15 cars destined for Oregon and four for Washington.

Six cars of malling barley to be used as feed are on their way north from Los Angeles for Oregon poultrymen and another six cars are being loaded at Vancouver, Wash., for Oregon feed dealers. Seven cars of oats reached Spokane yesterday from the midwest, with four to go to Washington and the others to Oregon. Forty-two cars, 23 for Oregon and 17 for Washington, now have come to the northwest.
