

Permanent Homes Short For Oregon War Veterans

Oregon's veterans are being housed, but homes—the places that give them roots and a feeling of permanence—still are paper houses.

Municipal administrations, chambers of commerce, veterans' and other groups have worked, planned, called on federal agencies and have come up against the same obstacle: too little to buy at too great a cost for the average veteran.

A survey of a dozen Oregon cities reveals overcrowding, inconvenience, frustration, but little actual distress.

At Portland, 3895 families live in the city's several housing projects—all but one of which are temporary, born of the need to house war workers. Other Oregon cities—principally college towns—by late May had been listed for 371 temporary housing units from surplus projects at Portland and Vancouver, Wash.

Students Swell Demand
Eugene and Corvallis, faced with a record influx of students, have large temporary housing projects—but for the most part these do not touch the problem of the non-student veteran who wants to put down roots. Eugene's Veterans of Foreign Wars arranged for an 80-unit trailer park and the city of Corvallis set aside four blocks for 60 temporary units on which work is under way, to meet, partially, community needs.

But Pendleton, which has an allocation of units from the federal public housing administration, is confronted with this problem: If the units are grouped, the city will have to install sewer and water mains for which it lacks budgeted funds. If they are scattered, the problem of finding lots will be acute.

Many cities are reluctant to take temporary measures because of the fear that temporary units will become permanent shams.

Communities have not been lacking in effort, however, to find a solution. Medford last March, under the leadership of the Jackson County chamber of commerce, attempted to show that a low-cost house could be built and converted to other use later without loss of the original investment. A lot was donated as were materials and labor. In 24 hours 150 workmen erected a 2x24 foot structure suitable for later use as a double garage. The veteran who got it in a drawing paid $1900 to the community chest for his house.

Grants Pass Project
Grants Pass adopted a different approach. Veterans Homes, Inc., was formed to equip veterans with lots as cheaply as possible so they could qualify for GI loans. Josephine county turned over a 40-acre tract within city limits for $1. The non-profit corporation borrowed money from its members and business men and laid out 30 large lots on part of the acreage. They installed sewers and water mains and offered the lots at cost. Fifty-odd have been sold on a down payment of $75 each. The total payment is expected to be between $125 and $150 in a city where lots have been held up to $2400.

Probably no city in the state has a more critical situation than Astoria. The chamber of commerce has tried to stimulate building by private interests, and aided in getting 275 temporary government units opened to veterans and service personnel. But it has no answer now, or in sight, for the 3000 men who will be stationed with the 19th fleet reserve base, the 200 base construction workers or the men who have returned from service.

They, as others throughout the state, are building a little at a time and waiting for the day when contractors tell them that materials can be had at a price veterans can afford.

Bids To Be Opened For Road Project

PORTLAND, Ore., July 5 (AP)—Bids will be opened July 16 on a 2.8 mile road 30 miles east of Bellingham, Wash., to open the way for lumber from Mount Baker national forest, the public roads administration said today.

Bids also will be opened then on improving a six-mile road up the South Fork McKenzie river about 40 miles east of Eugene. Both projects are part of a forest service program to release more timber for housing.

State Studies Price Control

SALEM, Ore., July 5 (AP)—Necessary procedures to set up price controls in the state were studied by Attorney General George Neuner today after Governor Snell reported last night that he is without authority to act.

The governor, reporting many pleas for statewide ceilings, said that under Oregon law he can issue only advisory proclamations—not enforcing orders.

He asked the attorney general to determine necessary steps to set up controls if the state is required to act. Earlier he had pointed out that congressional action may make control provision by the state unnecessary.

With the possibility of any executive order from the governor eliminated, Oregonians heard another prophecy of a price boom. Portland bakers predicted that bread might jump two cents a loaf to compensate for the vanished federal wheat subsidy. The bakers said they expected other wheat and flour products to rise proportionately.

A motor-driven device has been developed to turn book pages for crippled veterans.

Lundy Funeral Set In Frisco

Word was received today that funeral services for the late Mrs. Anna Lundy, mother of Clemens Lundy of this city, will take place at 10 a. m. Sunday, at the Dugan funeral parlors in San Francisco. Interment will follow.

Mrs. Lundy, 70, was killed in an automobile accident July 3, near Weed, Calif., en route to Klamath Falls from Los Angeles to visit her son and daughter-in-law. Mr. and Mrs. Clemens Lundy, for the fourth of July holidays, Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson were seriously injured. They were on the way to Klamath Falls with Mrs. Lundy, and then planned to go to Seattle to visit relatives there.

Runaway Plane Causes Death

PORTLAND, July 5 (AP)—A runaway plane's propeller killed a man yesterday and cut his wife, while dozens of Fourth of July spectators watched and the victim's son sat frozen at the controls.

Investigators said the man, Frayne F. Gaylord, 38, apparently whirled the propeller while the engine was at full throttle instead of idling speed, and the gunned plane leaped its brakes to speed down the field.

The two-place demonstrator plane struck Gaylord after appearing to "chase" him down the field, and cut Mrs. Gaylord's hand as she struggled to pull him away. Bystanders fled as the plane roared toward them.

Their son, Frayne Jr., 14, succeeded in shutting off the engine at the impact. He had been sitting at the controls where the father had placed him to demonstrate how to start the engine.

Sheriff's officers said the man had been taking flying lessons but was not a pilot. The tragedy occurred at the Troh airport near here. The airport manager said the plane started moving before any pilot could reach it.

A STATEMENT ABOUT PRICES

Recent announcements of higher prices on certain foods call for absolutely wasteless menu planning and more careful and economical food buying in order to "balance the budget." We sincerely believe we can help you get the most out of your food dollar, if you will

1. Safeway prices give consumers the benefit of savings resulting from our way of doing business by pricing at the lowest point that will yield a reasonable profit. "Not how much we can 'get' for an item, but how low it can be sold" is the determining factor.
2. Safeway does not go in for "ballyhoo" or deep-cut below-cost prices on a few items to attract customers. Rather, all items—store wide—are sold at the very minimum prices every day. At the same time, Safeway pays legitimate market prices to farmers and other producers of food.
3. Safeway will do no speculative hoarding and will maintain largest possible supplies of foods in stores at all times—made equally available to all.
