

Scholars, Not Snoopers Or Sirens, Rated Best For Intelligence Work

By CLARKE BLACK
WASHINGTON, July 11 (AP)—Lack of trained career personnel tended to make United States intelligence activities before the war a rather amateurish, hit-and-miss enterprise.

This to some extent is being corrected. From lessons learned in the war, the national intelligence authority (NIA), our new foreign intelligence system, is proceeding on broad, realistic lines.

The emphasis today is on large staffs of scholars and technical specialists, rather than on sinister international snoopers and wily female charmers. "Ninety per cent or more of intelligence is freely available to anybody who wants it," says William Benton, assistant secretary of state for public affairs. "You can get it in libraries and bookshops and on newsstands, from individuals and from our accredited missions abroad. It's open intelligence."

Masses of such data are channeled back to this country to secretaries of state, war and navy, who compose NIA, and various other government agencies. Often the most prosaic government announcements regarding contracts, shipments and assignment of personnel reveal information of high strategic value.

Much Available Here
Within the United States are hidden mines of information about foreign powers. In fact, officials of the now disbanded office of strategic service (OSS) estimated that 80 per cent of the information used in the air war against Japan was obtained within this country—from the files of banks, insurance companies, engineering companies, business firms of all kinds and the private records of individuals.

The navy obtained highly important information regarding the beaches of Okinawa from a shell collector living in the midst of the Arizona desert. He had spent years on Okinawa studying the shells.

Under Dr. William L. Langner, former Harvard historian who during the war was chief of the research and analysis branch of OSS, the state department is organizing a unit employing hundreds of scholars, formerly in OSS.

They will make broad, systematic studies covering many areas and including all phases of a subject: economic, ethnological, historical, political, etc. Subjects will cover those with which diplomats, occupation officials and military men must deal, such as the Ruhr, the Turkish straits and the Italian situation.

Vocational Guidance Offered By GI Bill

Veterans attending school or learning a trade or profession under the GI bill may now receive the advantages of experienced vocational and educational guidance, Zeno Dent, veteran administration representative in this area, has announced.

The services of the guidance section, Zent explained, have been devoted largely up to now to advising disabled veterans, since the procedure is a requirement of the law for these men before they take advantage of educational or training benefits. However, the law provides that VA guidance facilities shall be available to all veterans, and with the bulk of the "urgent" cases out of the way, personnel and facilities are now available for all veterans wishing to take advantage of them, Zent said.

'Mongold' Proposed As Dam Town Name

PORTLAND, July 11 (AP)—The name of Mongold for the Detroit dam project town on the North Santiam river has been approved by the chief of army engineers at Washington, D. C.

The name will honor Claude C. Mongold, Eugene, a member of the preliminary survey party who was killed April 8, 1943, in an auto while returning from the river site to his Eugene office.

Caldwell Quits Lakeview Post

LAKEVIEW, Ore., July 11—C. C. Caldwell, superintendent of the Lakeview school system since April, 1943, handed in his resignation to the school board and left Tuesday for Anchorage, Alaska, where he will become superintendent of the Anchorage school system.

Supt. Caldwell came to Lakeview from Wasco, Ore., where he served as superintendent of schools. His superintendency at Anchorage is a promotion, and enrollment in the schools there consists of 425 high school pupils and 800 or more in grade schools.

If the necessary permit can be secured, Caldwell plans on driving the Alcan highway. During his time in Lakeview many new improvements have been added to the school system. The school board has named David Bates, principal of Central school the past year, to succeed Caldwell to the superintendency. Bates is well qualified for his new position, having graduated from Iowa State Teachers college at Cedar Falls and the University of Michigan with majors in education and administration. His teaching experience includes two years at Filer, Ida.; six years at Cedar Falls, Ia.; one year at Belding, Mich., and nine years at Harbor Springs, Mich., during part of which time he also served as superintendent.

Any unmarried girl in Klamath county may enter. A complete western riding outfit will be presented to the princess from the Town shop.

'Time' Raises Price To 20 Cents A Copy

NEW YORK, July 11 (AP)—Time magazine today announced it was raising its price to 20 cents on newsstands or $6.50 for yearly subscriptions.

"Time has held to its original price all during the war years, and now reluctantly makes this announcement because of greatly increased costs," said an announcement in the July 15 issue.
