

Barley Crop Menaced By New Mite

Farmers in the Tulelake area are very concerned at present over the outcome of their barley crop which is being attacked by a mite. The exact amount of damage to the fields is unknown, but it is agreed that it is reaching a very serious stage.

The mite, which has been attacking whole areas, has not appeared in this district before. Farmers are familiar with the red spider mite but this seems to be of a different species. The chemical DDT and various combinations have been used to dust the distressed fields but so far no control has been found. One reason for this may be because of the "husky" build of the insects, which are covered by a hard shell. Barely visible to the naked eye, the mite appears slightly red when viewed under a microscope.

Affected plants are seldom noticed until the barley begins to lose color as the mites suck out the sap. In some fields as high as 75 mites have been found on one stalk of barley.

C. A. Henderson, county agricultural agent, hopes that the mites may disappear and the barley outgrow the insect. In the meantime entomologists are keeping a close check on the barley in an attempt to find some method of control.

Harvest Jobs Hard To Find For First Time Since 1941

SALEM, July 10 (AP)—Oregon farm laborers were having a hard time finding jobs this week, the first time there has been a farm labor surplus in Oregon since before the war. The Oregon State College extension service said today that the next farm labor difficulties will not come until the hop harvest about August 20.

The cherry harvest bogged down because of the lack of tin cans and barrels, so that processors have placed growers under a quota system, limiting the amount each grower may bring to the plant each day. As a result, cherry picking labor needs have been reduced greatly. Pickers can't get in full time in the orchards.

Reports that Monday's heavy rain had caused severe damage to cherry crops in the Salem area proved premature, as growers now say they haven't been hurt much. The wind dried the rain off the cherries so that the sun didn't crack them.

The harvesting of blackcaps, raspberries and loganberries reaches the peak this week, with plenty of pickers on hand. The berries are late because of cool weather.

Haying is in full swing in eastern Oregon with a few temporary labor shortages reported. These shortages disappear as soon as word gets around that jobs are available.

The wheat harvest will start in the Pendleton district next week with additional opportunities for farm jobs.

Platoons still are working in Multnomah county strawberry patches, with growers trying to get the last of the berries picked. Some growers are offering bonuses to a grower offering a dollar a crate.

Potato pickers are needed in Malheur county, and hay growers there also are calling for help.

Oregon's fall pig goal of 18,000 sows to farrow is 10 per cent cut from 1945, and is in line with the 10 per cent reduction recommended nationally. The reduction was recommended to save grain for famine areas abroad.

Discontinuance of OPA will not affect the agricultural wage stabilization program, the Oregon USDA wage stabilization board points out.

Removal of price controls may result in higher feed prices than were reached after World War I, the OSC extension service says. Last month, feed costs were 208 per cent of the 1910-14 average.

A pound of butterfat would buy 23.7 pounds of dairy ration in June, compared with 26.2 pounds in June, 1945. A dozen eggs in June would buy only 9.6 pounds of poultry feed, compared with 12.4 pounds a year ago.

BUILDING APPLICATIONS
PORTLAND, July 11 (AP)—Construction applications for 13 buildings totaling $150,000 were approved and 24 valued at $426,300 refused by the civilian production administration Oregon review committee yesterday.

Bakery Truck Drivers Offered $10 Increase

PORTLAND, July 11 (AP)—Bakery truck driver-salesmen are considering a $60 a week wage offer by employers which Attorney Ranson D. Melnick, employer agent, reported would be a $10 a week increase.

The employer offer was made yesterday after negotiations on other wage offers were stalemated.

James Pederson, union secretary, said an employer offer of 15 per cent increase amounting to 19 cents an hour, had been rejected by bakers, helpers and women workers.

Airplanes for carrying perishable freight are to be built with both heated and refrigerated compartments.

Chorus Called For Pageant

Any children or young people wishing to participate in the dance choruses of the Centennial pageant to be held August 22, 23, and 24, are urged to register with Mrs. Eve Benson at the Eve Benson dance studio.

Applicants need not have any previous training or any special skill. Dance routines are simple and children will be instructed by Mrs. Benson. Costumes will be furnished by the Centennial association.

Approximately 500 children are needed for the choruses. There will be only afternoon rehearings for the group until the week before the pageant when rehearsal times will be announced.

The tire industry in 1945 produced slightly more than one civilian tire for each car on the road; military demand took the remainder.

Spud Growers Hear Lecture

Over 50 Klamath county potato seed growers attended a potato disease demonstration at the department of agriculture experiment station Monday, July 1.

Growers heard Dr. J. A. Milbrath, associate plant pathologist from Oregon State college, discuss potato diseases. Milbrath pointed out disease symptoms in potato plants and explained that early removal of diseased plants is necessary for the production of good seed.

Leafroll, a virus disease of potatoes, is Klamath basin's greatest threat, Milbrath said. Virus diseases are spread by aphids in the same manner as malaria is spread by mosquitoes.

Milbrath stressed early removal of leafroll infected plants. He explained that it is necessary to remove seed pieces as well as plants and plants should be carried away from the field so that aphids can have no opportunity to feed on the rugged plants.

Portland-Los Angeles Non-Stop Line Asked

PORTLAND, July 11 (AP)—Authority to operate non-stop flights between Portland and Los Angeles has been asked by United Air Lines in proposed August 1 schedules filed with the civil aeronautics board.

George Hatch, district traffic manager for the line, said the 900-mile route could be flown in four and a half hours, cutting one hour from the present time.

Lumber Committee Moves To Portland
PORTLAND, July 11 (AP)—Shift of lumber industry headquarters has prompted transfer of headquarters of the lumbermen's industrial relations committee to Portland from Seattle.

H. D. Weaver, secretary-manager for the Douglas fir logging and mill operators, said a Seattle office would be continued.
