ADDISON

While the Addison Sunday farm is in the throes of a five-year plan which, maybe in 10 years, will show a scene not unlike the Bend pictures that graced yesterday's front page, the raison d'etre is to sweat a little between fishing trips and ultimately, perhaps, to graze a goat.

The water will not be clear, like Bend's, but it will be warmer, better for irrigation, and will stretch over the horizon to the Ft. Klamath meadows with Crater Lake mountains as the backdrop.

Yesterday, George Little of New York, president of the General Features Corporation, was a visitor at this newspaper. He volunteered the statement that he had visited towns and cities all over the country, but that not even Westchester county itself, where culture and riches literally ooze from the seams, could boast finer shops than Klamath Falls.

Incidentally, Little was a member of the War Advertising Council during the war and had struck up a friendship with Frank Jenkins on Frank's visits to Washington as a member of the Council's newspaper advisory committee.

And now, as Saturday business begins to stir, yours truly is pulling out . . . to work at beautifying the Addison landscape. . . . no, to go fishing, far from the haunts of civilization.

Front And Center

By CARTER BURNS
CORRESPONDENT, in a letter to our editor, has cited the 14th amendment to the Constitution of the United States and inquired why the citizens of this country remain mute in the face of recent events in Mississippi, referring undoubtedly to the renomination—and certain re-election—of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo.

Much has been written in the past few weeks about the Mississippi primary election and among it has been little, if any favorable comment from outside the boundaries of that state. The criticism has centered about two points—the primary election system and the choice of its voters, Senator Bilbo.

As does Oregon, Mississippi requires party membership as qualification for voting a primary ballot. Perhaps its political parties do impose restrictions tending to exclude certain aspirants for membership. So also do many organizations pretending to foster brotherhood and equality throughout the proudly self-declared "democratic" states of this nation.

Each state of the union is privileged by the constitution to elect its own representatives in the United States Senate. Exercising this prerogative, the voters of Mississippi have expressed their choice by an overwhelming margin. If Mississippi wants Bilbo to represent it in the Senate, this is its sovereign right.

The eighteenth century French philosopher,

Voltaire, sounded the clarion for free speech when he declared that however much he might disagree with another's opinion, he would defend to the death that man's right to express his opinion. That precept may well be followed by critics of Mississippi's right of political expression.

The World Today

By DEWITT MACENZIE
Associated Press Foreign Affairs Analyst
THE breakdown of Chinese distribution of UNRRA food, resulting in Director-General LaGuardia ordering all but emergency supplies withheld from China, appears to have been due to grave "mismanagement" to use a euphemism, but call it by any name you will and it still is a tragedy in view of the terrible famine conditions in that stricken country.

UNRRA staff members in China have accused Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's government of failing to get materials to millions in the interior, and of using relief goods for political ends. It is said that supplies also are reaching the black markets.

T. T. Tsang, head of the Chinese national relief and rehabilitation administration (CNRRA), in appealing to Mr. LaGuardia to rescind the order cutting relief, admitted to newsmen that "local interference by both sides" (Chinese nationalists and Chinese communists) had prevented supplies from reaching assigned areas. He declared, however, that this contravened orders by both Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and the communist commanders.

Honest Graft Condoned
ALL this leaves a lot unexplained, and I have before me a letter from a well-informed American resident of China which takes the matter a good deal deeper. This letter deals with what is known as "squeeze" in China. "Squeeze" is the equivalent of "honest graft." That's what the butler gets when custom permits him to help himself to his lordship's whiskey and port. "Squeeze" is a prerogative which is widely condoned in the Orient by tradition.

The letter at hand says that "squeeze" is an accepted fact in every negotiation, even with the handling of UNRRA supplies by the Chinese. "It would be interesting," continues the writer, "to know what a small percentage of the relief supplies ever reach the war devastated areas in China, for every person handling them gets his 'squeeze' and the starving people are inland so fast that many workers handle the supplies."

In this connection Tung Pi-wu, chairman of the communist relief organization, stated yesterday that only half of one per cent of all UNRRA supplies sent to China had seeped through to communist areas. Previously UNRRA employees in Shanghai had estimated that less than two per cent of relief goods reached the communist districts, a statement which T. F. Tsang described as "misleading" since it didn't take into account the almost complete breakdown of communications due to the war, and to the fact that many supplies were machinery and the like not intended for the interior.

Reach Black Market
IN any event there is no dispute about faulty distribution. But that isn't the most shocking point dealt with by the letter at hand. My informant, writing under date of June 5, mentions having seen supplies from original UNRRA shipments on sale in the Shanghai black market.

Of course "squeeze" and other bad handling of supplies doesn't by any means account for all the difficulties. It is all too true that there is scant rail and water transportation remaining in China after the long years of wartime destruction, and former President Herbert Hoover said in Shanghai on May 30 that the tonnage needs of relief were greater than the transportation facilities.

At that time Mr. Hoover described the food need of China as "enormous," with whole villages in the interior facing extinction. He said it was impossible to compute the numbers of people in critical conditions, but no doubt they ran into millions. Unhappy China bears a heavy yoke of suffering.

Farm Laborer Held On Driving Charge

Eural Virgil Fisher, Tulelake farm laborer, is held in the county jail on a charge of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor to which he has entered a plea of not guilty in justice court.

Fisher's bail was set at $150 and unable to post the amount, he was returned to jail. He is to have a trial before Justice of the Peace J. A. Mahoney.

The state policeman who arrested Fisher yesterday morning reported that he observed him operating a car on highway 66 near Shasta way and that he was driving on the wrong side of the road.

BOYLE'S NOTEBOOK

By HAL BOYLE
BERLIN, July 13 (AP)—Living in a bomb-damaged German house under repair is a real adventure in Babel.

American wives waiting to come to Berlin have no idea what an agony of Katzenjammer housecleaning their husbands are enduring to ready some kind of a home for them.

At present I am dwelling in a home in suburban Zehlendorf, which Dick Kasischke, an Associated Press correspondent, is having fixed up for his wife and daughter.

It wasn't a bad foxhole at all when we moved in. The plumbing on opposite sides of the house worked on alternate days, the roof was okay and, although there weren't any window panes left in my room, the bed was comfortable and the rain didn't blow in very far.

Downstairs, the dining room did look a little as if it had been used for a chicken coop, but this didn't matter because we were eating out anyway at an army mess. Besides, the icebox worked well enough to keep the beer cool and the grand piano wasn't missing any important keys.

No Bismarck Picture
We are very comfortable. It was a nice house, I liked it because it was the only house I ever saw in Germany that didn't have a picture of Bismarck on the wall. All we had was a statue of the first Kaiser Wilhelm.

Then the German housekeeper and the two elderly maids learned that "the American housewife" was here from Detroit. The storm struck.

"Ziss house—no American man live in it," said the housekeeper. Since then we have been enveloped in a domestic whirlwind of dust, mops, pails, paint, cement, floor shaving and Teutonic arguments between the housekeeper and the battalion of German glaziers, plasterers, painters, gardeners, woodworkers, and plumbers supplied by the army for "operation make ready."

We wake up sneezing and go to bed coughing and the place smells like a hardware store. It looks like a cross between a carpenter's ball and a circus going to town.

Each morning I awake to see a dozen kraut workmen leering through the bedroom door. I can't get into the bathroom because two plumbers are banging on the pipes. They tear out a pipe and cuss the Versailles treaty. They put the pipe back in and complain about the four-power occupation.

Start Over Again
They carefully scrape the floor clean. The plasterers arrive and work on the ceiling. That's done, the floor has to be done again. The glazier says he has done a good job of restoring the glass in a big hinged window on the sun porch. The housekeeper says he hasn't put in enough wooden cross supports.

"Verdammt," says the old glazier. He triumphantly lifts up the window—the whole pane falls out and showers around his ears in broken fragments. That settles the argument.

Every time a rose blooms outside, one of the gardeners comes steaming in to report like the anchor man on a mile relay. He brings in half the garden on the shoes and one of the maids takes a look at the rugs, and tells him what she would like to do to him.

After two weeks of steady sawing and hammering and brush-slapping, the old homestead is beginning to glisten like an ad in a homeowner's magazine, but Kasischke is still wearing
