Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

AVIATION takes the center of the stage in this area, with our neighbors at Lakeview taking over the airport there from the navy this weekend, and Klamath Falls preparing to inaugurate its first major airline service on August 1.

EPLEY

Further rounding out the picture, Siskiyou county supervisors are making plans for operation of the big field at Montague, which the army built when there was believed to be danger of Japanese invasion of the west coast through Crescent City harbor. Alturas, likewise, is air-minded, and has boasted growing aviation activity for several years.

Lakeview's fine field, which comes under formal municipal jurisdiction on Sunday, was developed by the navy as an auxiliary facility, in connection with the Klamath naval air station. Because the navy had large shooting ranges in Lake county, it needed re-fueling and re-arming facilities at Lakeview, and built an airport there that is unusually large and complete for a community of that size.

Thus, Lakeview and Klamath both benefitted greatly from navy aviation activities in this region during the war. Our guess is that there will develop a considerable air traffic immediately between Lakeview and Klamath Falls, even though as yet there is no regular airline service connecting the two fields. Klamath fliers are starting the program off properly today, taking a fleet of local planes to Lakeview as a feature of the weekend ceremonies over there.

The communities of our big area of South Central Oregon and Northern California have many common interests, and are already closely knit. Aviation ties will bring them even closer together. We predict that flying to Lakeview, Montague, Alturas and other nearby points will become common procedure for many local people before long.

From Behind The Brush

MOST men have a secret curiosity about their own beards. Having used razors religiously and on a daily basis for years, they can only guess at the potentialities of the growth they are always nipping in the bud. Thus, there is quite general and enthusiastic response to the local suggestion that Klamath males grow beards to provide atmosphere for the centennial celebration. Some of our friends wouldn't even wait for the starting gun.

There are, of course, a few who may be curious about what their whiskers may do, but also are fearful of the result. These we see going about smooth-shaven in the face of disapproving public opinion. For these, there awaits the special court, over which presides Judge Balentine, a gent with a fine set of white whiskers and a strong sense of civic duty as it applies to the males of the community. May his rule be just but stern.

Deserved

IT is pleasing to newspaper people throughout Oregon that George Turnbull, beloved old-timer on the staff of the school of journalism at the University of Oregon, has been elevated to the full deanship of the school. Mr. Turnbull has served as acting dean since the death of Dean Eric Allen some two years ago. He will serve as dean until 1947, when he will be succeeded by Russell I. Thackrey of Kansas State college. The plan was laid out in view of Mr. Turnbull's approach to the retirement age.

We have fond personal memories of George Turnbull in the years we were pursuing our studies (yeh, we pursued them, at least) at the school of journalism down at Eugene. He helped us get the first job that bolstered our faltering finances. He taught us, advised us, and gave us personal friendship that has ripened in the succeeding years. For 30 years, he has been doing those things for young men and women at the Eugene institution, and all of them rejoice his worth has been recognized by the full deanship.

The World Today

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press Foreign Affairs Analyst

BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY ERNEST BEVIN is one of Europe's most outspoken statesmen, as witness his blunt assertion during debate in the house of commons that the Austrian situation "is very delicate at the present moment" and that he didn't know "whether eastern Austria may even be cut off."

This statement of course is interpreted as referring to the possibility that eastern Austria —which is occupied by Russia and contains the major portion of the country's industrial capacity—may be severed and become a unit in the permanent Soviet zone of influence. Startling as that may sound as coming from a foreign minister in debate, it is no surprise to observers who long have noted that control of all Austria appeared to be one of Moscow's objectives.

What spurred Mr. Bevin to this frankness was sharp criticism leveled at him by several members of commons for his agreement at the Big Four foreign ministers' conference in Paris that Italy should be permitted to retain the South Tyrol. He defended the action on the ground that it should be considered in relation to the whole European situation and not as an independent matter. It was then that he referred to the delicacy of the Austrian situation and pointed out that she had not yet achieved independence.

Independence Agreed

BEVIN might have added—though he did not —that the Big Three agreed to the independence of Austria at the Moscow conference of 1944, and reaffirmed it later. Austrian independence is a matter of great concern to the western allies in the rehabilitation of Europe, and the situation between Russia and the western powers has grown increasingly difficult.

One of the most striking indications of Russia's intentions came three weeks ago when, without consulting the other allies, she announced that she had taken over ownership of most of Austria's industries and other property in the Soviet zone as German reparations. Moscow rejected American and British representatives contesting this action.

Naturally Moscow can't draw all of Austria within the Soviet zone of influence so long as Britain, America and France continue to occupy their zones. There is small doubt, however, that withdrawal by the western allies would see Russia move in. It is given to wonder how long this strained posjtion can continue, since the western allies are anxious to see an Austrian treaty signed so that all the powers can withdraw their troops.

Mystery hour for Sunday will hit at 6 o'clock when U. S. Steel presents George Raft in "Murder My Sweet." "Murder My Sweet" was originally the novel "Farewell My Lovely," which came out in a couple of pocket book editions, and was changed when Dick Powell took it over for his tough guy routine in the movie. Now Raft takes a belated crack at it for listeners. The story involves a lost night club singer, a goofy ex-con who stands about 9 feet high and a handful of missing emeralds. The private eye also goes blind due to beatings and several people are bumped off; which, all in all, makes it quite a thrilling little drama.

Guest stars on Ford's Festival of American Music Sunday, will be Lee and Lyn Wilde, twin starlets of MGM and Andre Previn, 17-year-old pianist arranger.

Sunday, from 2 to 2:30, KFLW will broadcast direct from Lakeview on the occasion of the formal opening of the Lakeview airfield. Chuck Cecil will be doing the announcing and Clarence Bauer will handle the technical end. In case they don't get back, blame it on Cecil. He's trying out his new car and may not make the trip.

The vigilantes for the kangaroo court around here don't need bloodhounds; they need trained tigers to get some of the violators of the whiskerino rules. All the men who skipped letting their beards grow are now running around making up elaborate excuses for not having them, or planning to stay home all day Saturday.

Two Die In Crash Of Private Plane

ROSALIA, Wash., July 27 (AP) Two men were killed yesterday afternoon when a private plane crashed in a wheat field four miles south of the city, it was learned here today.

The victims were Porter Witt of Spokane, who leases the Rosalia airport and is also a pilot for Northwest Airlines, and Charles Perrin of Rosalia, partner in a garage business here.

The plane crashed yesterday afternoon but the wreckage was not found until today.

4-H Clubbers Set For Camp

Final plans are being made for the 4-H club camp at the Lake o' the Woods, July 28 through August 10. Approximately 65 girls will travel to the lake for the first week, and 60 boys will enjoy camp facilities during the second week.

There will be three activity periods daily with various crafts being offered. Shell craft will be taught by Mrs. Vivian Eichendorf, leather craft by Lloyd Seely, fingerpainting and the making of Christmas cards by Joy Biggs.

Instruction in forest conservation and tree identification will be given by Dan Robinson, Oregon State college extension forester. Francis Skinner, camp director, will teach rifle marksmanship, and Mrs. Winnifred Gillen, home demonstration agent, will explain canning judging. Waterfront director and life guard will be Don Johnson.

Alaska Issues To Be Heard

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP)—A congressional committee which hopes to solve the questions of steamship transportation for Alaska and allocation of fish trap sites in territorial waters will open hearings in Juneau August 5.

Rep. Jackson (D-Wash.) chairman of a subcommittee of the house merchant marine and fisheries committee will head the investigations and will be accompanied by Rep. Herter (R-Mass.), Rep. Bland (D-Va.) and Delegate Bartlett of Alaska.

After completing the Alaskan hearings, expected to take about a week, the committee will hold hearings on the Alaskan questions in Seattle August 12 and go to Portland, Ore., for hearings on fishery problems on the Columbia river on August 13.

Reclamation Group Picks Oklahoma Man

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP)—Appointment of Don McBride of Oklahoma City as secretary-manager of the National Reclamation association was announced today.

McBride, chairman of the Oklahoma planning and resources board, will take up his new duties in Washington about Sept. 1, Acting Secretary E. W. Rising said.

McBride will succeed F. O. Hagie, who resigned June 1 to become executive vice president of the Seattle, Wash., chamber of commerce.

CLUB SHORTAGE

SHEFFIELD, Ill., July 27 (AP) Sam Smith, an 83-year-old retired farmer, has taken up golf —and uses only a putter. He gave his other clubs to boys learning to play, but he does all right. He shoots in the 60's on the nine hole, par 37 Coal Creek Country club course.

Scandals Seen By Ellsworth

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP)—Rep. Ellsworth (R-Ore) predicted today in a statement that if republicans win control of the house or senate, or both, in this year's elections, war scandals will be divulged that will shake the capital to its "very foundations."

He said the present inquiry by the senate war investigating committee into the affairs of Henry M. Garsson and his associates in a munitions combine "is actually just a dress rehearsal for what is to come."

"Even if the political control of the congress does not change, further scandals will be revealed," Ellsworth said. "However, if the republicans obtain control of either house or senate, or both, the May affairs and even the Teapot Dome scandal will have about the same relative rating in comparison to future revelations as a firecracker would to an atomic bomb.
