

Would-Be Students Face Uncertainty At Colleges

By The Associated Press
Prospective students at Oregon colleges and universities may be on tenterhooks until the last minute, not certain whether they will be able to enter the school of their choice.

The reason is the tremendous increase of those who plan to enter college and the lack of housing for them.

Virtually all Oregon institutions are confronted by the same problem, but because they attract the greatest number, the University of Oregon and Oregon State college have it in the most acute form.

At the university, high academic standards have been set. Out-of-state students are required to have higher qualifications than those from Oregon. This, however, has only lessened the problem, not solved it.

After clearing students academically, Clifford Constance, assistant to the registrar, reported university-controlled housing was allocated to them on the basis of priority of applications. When the available housing was filled—and it was some time ago—the university gave qualified acceptance to those meeting the academic standards. If they can show that they can provide their own housing—with relatives, in rooming houses or otherwise—they will be accepted. If not, the university will not be open to them this fall.

Veterans, whose return to the classrooms has caused much of the problem, were given priority on new housing installed on the campus. It will accommodate about 1000, including 200 to 300 married veterans.

At Oregon State college, the picture is somewhat different. There is no requirement for advance registration as at the university, if someone—if an Oregon resident—shows up on opening day and has housing, he will be admitted if he meets entrance requirements. E. B. Lemon, dean of administration, reports.

However, the likelihood of that happening is remote, for Corvallis is jammed to the rafters. As a matter of fact, some 8000 applications for fall enrollment already exceed by 1500 to 2000 the number that can be accommodated. All college-controlled living quarters are filled.

Every effort, Lemon said, will be made to place veterans, but there is a serious question whether any more can be accepted unless they rustle up their own housing. Out-of-state veterans cannot be given priority of any kind, he said, if Oregon students are to be accommodated.

Authorities are urging those who do not now have assurance of a place to live, to attend one of the other institutions in the state. Many of them also are at or near their maximum capacities, but some, such as Vanport at Portland, can still take reservations. Many prospective students may find themselves without a school of attending one they didn't pick in the first place. But officials, who have been spending the summer seeking a solution, say there is no help for it; there's just not enough housing for everyone.

This mail will be delivered to the Mainliner planes by the Klamath Falls sheriffs posse and commander Burt E. Hawkins will dispatch the first mail sack to the plane.

Klamath Air Day festivities also will feature displays of new private aircraft, special demonstrations of private planes and a P-38 fighter plane, acrobatic stunts and passenger flights over the city.

An Air Day banquet sponsored by United Air Lines, will end the celebration. Malcolm Epley will act as toastmaster at the dinner and introduce visiting officials. W. R. Thigpen, special assistant to the president of United, will be the main speaker.

U. S. Discloses Inquiry On Activities Of Klan

WASHINGTON, July 31 (AP)—The justice department disclosed today that it is investigating Ku Klux Klan activities in seven states to determine whether federal laws are being violated.

The department said court action will be instituted against the Klan if such violations are uncovered. Evidence involving any violations of state laws will be turned over to state authorities, if requested.

The investigation is being made under the direction of the department's civil rights section in New York, Michigan, Tennessee, Florida, California, Mississippi and Georgia.

However, complaints are being received from all parts of the country about the resurgent Klan's activities. The originators include individuals, labor unions, civil rights societies and other organizations.

Some name dates, places and persons involved in alleged Klan acts. All such complaints are turned over to the FBI, which makes investigations for the civil rights section.

The department expects a sharp increase in Klan activity as a result of negro voting in southern primaries, the dislocation of populations resulting from the war, congested living conditions and the other aftermaths of war.

The department began checking Klan activities shortly before Attorney General Tom Clark assailed the hooded order in a speech at Philadelphia on May 18.

At that time, Clark said "We must rid ourselves of such things as organized bigotry—and I mean specifically such an exercise as the Ku Klux Klan."

The department's investigation includes two specific complaints of alleged Klan intimidation against negroes.

One complaint alleges that the Klan cooperated with certain local officials in a Florida city to intimidate negroes from moving into a housing project.

The second complaint alleges that before the Georgia primary election a masked band of white people visited a number of negro houses in one county, shot into several houses and warned the negroes against voting.

Sparkman Leads In Alabama Race

By The Associated Press
Rep. John Sparkman of Alabama, democratic whip of the house, was within sight today of a primary election majority which would guarantee him the senate seat of the late John H. Bankhead.

Sparkman had the support of the CIO-PAC and other elements of organized labor. But the 10-year veteran of congress, himself the son of a tenant farmer, obtained his most whopping majorities yesterday in rural areas.

Negroes voted throughout the state. The polls were opened to them in some counties for the first time to conform with a supreme court decree that they could not be barred because of their color.
