Naval Hero Sees No Chance Of War In The Near Future

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP)—An American fleet commander who has organized more amphibious landings than any man in history sees no immediate possibility of war because "the offensive power of each big nation is far ahead of its defensive power."

"And that is no more paradoxical," said Vice Admiral Daniel E. Barbey, "than to say that two men with revolvers aren't likely to start shooting if each knows in advance that he is going to be badly hurt or killed."

This 56-year-old veteran of 63 landings in the Pacific has no illusions about the price of another large-scale war. He thinks that "until there is established some central world authority that can safeguard our security," military muscle is our best guarantee against any sudden overwhelming knockout blow.

"A world war of the future will be far more calamitous than those in the past," said Barbey, commander of the fourth fleet, in an interview aboard the battleship North Carolina. "The victor will suffer but slightly less than the defeated. War must be eliminated."

A powerful, energetic man with graying hair and vigorous eyes, Barbey is as skilled in the give-and-take of diplomacy as in the swift corrosion of battle. He is a much-decorated officer—one of fewer than 10 living foreigners to hold China's special Grand Order of the Cloud and Banner—and he is among the navy's most popular and influential leaders. He is optimistic on achieving peace through the United Nations and has ideas on how it can be done.

He thinks the keystone to more war or permanent peace lies in "the desire of all nations for two things: to maintain their own way of life—that includes their political systems—and to safeguard their security from foreign menace."

A peace program which extends all countries these fundamental guarantees, he believes, will be successful.

"All nations, as well as our own," he said, "are fearful of their security and fearful of coming to any agreement which would permit foreign idealogies and creeds being imposed upon them.

"If the Russians feel we can't interfere with their brand of communism, if we feel that the Russians can't interfere with our political forms, if the French feel that neither country can inflict its system on them—then we can get peace in the world.

"But if we expect other nations not to impose their ideologies on neighboring countries, we must be careful not to attempt to do that ourselves."

Barbey said that America "militarily and economically," is the strongest country in the world.

Peace Slow

The admiral is impatient with those who expect peace "to be gained overnight" in a world where big nations fear differing political views will bring them into conflict.

Returning to his thesis that all the big powers could hit hard but couldn't keep their own people from being hurt in return, Barbey concluded:

"The knowledge of this offensive power and the ability to retaliate is the greatest deterrent to an aggressor.

"I believe that if we can remain strong—and I appreciate fully the tremendous tax burden that requires—other nations will be induced to work toward an agreement to outlaw all mass destruction weapons and develop safeguards to make sure there can be no violations.

Scouts Show Training In Annual Circus At Armory

The armory was packed Friday night for the Klamath basin district Boy Scout circus, in which 400 to 500 Boy Scouts demontrated their Scouting ability.

Starting at 8 p. m. with a grand entry, the episodes were so arranged to outline and carry through the successive stages of Scouting and cub activity. The five cub packs were presented first in a series of small skits, followed by a demonstration of disaster relief and first aid, a set being designed to simulate a burning building and a live person being rescued and aided.

Rope work and knot tying were next spotlighted, numerous small ropes with a variety of knots in them were distributed throughout the audience as gifts. Signalling through the ages was the title of the next series of skits, showing various methods of transmitting messages from the primitive tom-tom to modern radio-telegraphy.

The Dances of the White Caribou was featured in the Indian dancing episode, the dancers entreating their god for good hunting.

Episode seven featured pioneering, with the Scouts erecting three towers on the stage without the use of a single nail, using ropes to bind the timbers together. A demonstration of fire-making was followed by cookery over the fires previously started. The circus ended with a demonstration of axemanship followed by the grand finale where the assembled Scouts gave the Scout pledge and a salute to the flag.

Scotty Lacoma was general chairman for the event and Vern Speirs acted as program director.

Vets Get More School

Some disabled veterans, who need more than the usual four years of training to reach their occupational objectives, now will be permitted to take additional training under public law 16, Zeno Dent, veterans administration training officer in this area, stated today.

Veterans so severely disabled that no course of training will restore them to employability in four years, and those who lose time in their courses because of health or other personal circumstances, will be helped by the new ruling, Dent explained.

Provision also has been made for disabled veterans who started pre-professional courses before the war and who have since proved their suitability for their chosen profession, but who still must have more than four years to prepare for it.

The VA official pointed out, however, that the plan for added training does not apply to any veterans in training under the GI bill, which bases eligibility on their length of service up to a maximum of 48 months of training. Most disabled veterans also will remain within the limit of four years of training, Dent advised.

Training in excess of four years will be given only the severely disabled in school, except in unusual instances of job training. The VA office in the courthouse building here has further details for inquiring veterans.

Girl Injured In Fall From Bunk

SPOKANE, Dec. 10 (AP)—The condition of Roberta Rogers, Salem, Ore., seriously injured when she fell off an upper bunk at Eastern Washington College of Education, was reported "improved" Monday.

Miss Rogers, daughter of N. S. Rogers, Oregon state forester, underwent an emergency operation after she fell and struck the sharp edge of a dresser, piercing the abdominal cavity.

College officials at Cheney said she had climbed onto an upper bunk for a nap, instead of using her own lower bunk. When her alarm clock sounded, officials said, she instinctively jumped up, reached for it, and fell.

NOTICE OF BOND SALE

Sealed proposals will be opened and considered by the Common Council of the City of Merrill, Oregon, for the purchase of General Obligation Water Bonds of said City, aggregating $50,000 for the purpose of providing funds for the reconstruction, repair, extension and improvement of the City Water System.

Said bonds will be in denominations of $1,000 each; shall be numbered serially 1 to 50, inclusive, dated January 1, 1947; will bear interest not to exceed 4% per annum payable semi-annually on July 1st and Jan. 1st of each year, principal and interest payable at the office of the City Treasurer at Merrill, Oregon, and will mature serially in numerical order at the rate of $2,000 per year, payable January 1st of each year from 1948 to 1972, inclusive.

Sealed bids will be received by the undersigned up to and including Dec. 26, 1946, at 8:00 P. M., when they will be opened and considered. Proposals must be unconditional and accompanied by a certified check for not less than 2% of the par value of the bonds on a bank doing business in this State. Bonds will be callable on Jan. 1, 1948 (unless maturing sooner) and on any semi-annual interest paying date thereafter, and may not be sold for less than 98% of par value. The Council reserves the right to reject any and all bids. In case of rejection, the check accompanying the bid will promptly be returned. An opinion on the legality of the bonds by John W. Shuler, bond attorney of Portland, Oregon, who has been assisting with this bond issue, will be furnished the successful bidder by the City of Merrill without charge, and the bid submitted will not be binding on the bidder, unless in the opinion of Mr. Shuler the bonds are legal. Further information may be secured from the undersigned or from City Attorney Thomas W. Chatburn, Merrill, Oregon.
