

Pulp Timber Development May Start Soon In Alaska

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (AP)—Alaska appeared Monday to be on the long-awaited verge of pulp-timber development.

"Conversations have been under way for many months with several interests who are actively seeking to develop the pulp and paper industry in the territory," Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug told a reporter.

Krug estimates that Alaska can produce 1,000,000 tons of newsprint paper a year—a quarter of the nation's needs.

From Senator Carl Hayden (D. Ariz.), chairman of the joint committee on printing, came an intimation that if private industry continues to be slow about Alaskan development, the government may have to take a hand.

Private Industry

"Nobody wants the government to build a paper mill up there if private industry will do so," the senator told a reporter.

"But we have to print the congressional record—and we have to have the paper to do it."

Other signs of likely future development:

1. The interior department has completed a study of Alaskan power prospects.
 2. The forest service has surveyed half a dozen blocks of pulp timber which could be made available for public advertisement upon short notice.
 3. Three large industrial groups investigated the major Alaskan pulp-timber stands last summer, the first to interest themselves seriously since the ambitious development plans of the late 20's were nullified by the depression.
- On an annual visit to Washington last week, Dr. C. Earl Albrecht of Juneau, Alaska's commissioner of health, said in an interview that "scads" of people, including some big operators, have been looking into the situation recently. He and other observers predicted definite action within a few months.

Krug Statement

Referring to a recent suggestion by John S. Knight, president of Knight Newspapers, Inc., to the senate small business committee that the government "inquire into the feasibility of developing the newsprint industry in Alaska," Krug said:

"During my visit to Alaska last summer, the need of the ter-

AP Teletype Operator Retires

TACOMA, Dec. 17 (AP)—Twenty-four years of sending and receiving the world's stop news stories were wound up yesterday by Clyde Criswell when he retired as a teletype operator for the Associated Press here.

Criswell joined the AP Jan. 29, 1922, as a Morse operator and continued in that capacity until the modern teletype replaced the dot-dash system of news transmission. A large part of his years of service have been spent in Tacoma.

The veteran operator said he plans to spend his retirement with his hobby, an amateur radio station, and his memories of momentous stories he has handled.

5-Year-Old Saves Lives Of Parents

PORTLAND, Dec. 17 (AP)—A five-year-old boy was credited Monday with saving the lives of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Quinn, overcome Monday morning by escaping gas fumes in their home.

The boy, Anthony, ran to a window and rapped until a neighbor's attention was attracted. A fire department first aid car brought the parents back to consciousness.

As Different as Night from Day

EVERY once in a while we hear someone (usually a lady) say: "Ale! Gosh, I don't like that heavy, bitter stuff!" And, frankly, we don't like that kind of ale, either. But, just as there is a difference in peoples, so also is there a difference in ales. A vast difference!

Our COLUMBIA ALE is no more like the heavy, bitter "old world" ales than night is like day. Whereas what are commonly called the "old style" or "old world" ales are dark in color, bitter in taste and heavy in content, our COLUMBIA ALE is the exact opposite. Light in color, pleasing in taste and mild in content. It is a delightful refinement of the old-world type ale to the modern American taste.

To the hundreds of thousands who are already enjoying COLUMBIA ALE this is no news but, if you are confusing COLUMBIA with old-type ale, you owe it to yourself to try a bottle and discover the delightful difference.

And not only is COLUMBIA ALE radically different from old-style ale but it is rather different from any other malt beverage. The difference is hard to define but thousands discern it by taste. We call it a difference in "texture"—a lighter, smoother Top O' The Tank texture which results from our distinctly different tank-top method of fermentation.

So, try a bottle, won't you? Discover for yourself the sheer delight of sipping a glass of this unusual beverage. If you do you'll probably be content with no other.
