It has been suggested by inference that the so-called "underprivileged" youngster is not being reached by the nationally-known youth organizations such as the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and others.

Allow me to clarify some thinking, point out a few facts, and offer a suggestion with the sole purpose of encouraging all adults to spend more hours with youngsters.

First, present-day youth organizations CAN and DO reach the underprivileged youngster both in their year-round program and in their summer camps. True, no group distinction or class distinction is made because of the so-called "underprivileged" but there are dozens of youngsters who attend these camps with the cooperation of men and women who serve on local group committees.

Must Be Interested

SECOND, before you can get a youngster into a summer camp or into a year-round character-building program of any kind, you must interest him. The American way of reaching him is through volunteer citizens who give of their time to work with him.

More Child Raising Advice Flows From Columnist's Pen

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP)—Most young couples planning ahead for a family want a boy instead of a girl.

As an unprejudiced observer on the parenthood scene, this always has amazed me. I think the only thing harder to raise than a good boy is a baby gorilla with the mumps.

How long does a boy really belong to you? Five, maybe six years. Then for ten years he is a savage, and for the next five years after that a callow introvert with mental growing pains.

And then he blossoms forth and belongs to the world—and to himself. But he really hasn't belonged to you since the day his first tooth was knocked out.

So it has been since Adam and his ex-rib got the eviction notice from Eden that began the world's housing shortage.

But you take a baby girl. Mr. and Mrs.—you got something! You don't find her playing hookey to go to a burlesque show, scrawling rude words on the sidewalk, or using telephone poles as duck pins for the family's only cat.

Mother's Helper
By nature she becomes mother's helper to learn her own future trade of housewife, and she practices her childhood wiles on the old man, thus giving that misunderstood hero of the hearth the little attentions that mama gave him before she discovered he was a pretty good mechanic but a lousy understudy of Valentino.

But many modern parents are breaking up this age-old normal pattern, and in these families little sister is growing up in the image of junior.

Now if I had a daughter—without turning her into a clothes horse, I would teach her that the most abominable sight in the eyes of civilized man—and a big cause of divorce—is a sloppy, untidy woman.

I would give her the back of the hairbrush if she ever screeched or yammered. I'd give her as a goal Shakespeare's Cordelia: "her voice was ever sweet and low." I would make her only one exception—when she laughed. A woman with a real belly laugh can shake a king's heart, and certainly will never die an old maid.

As soon as her fingers were nimble, I'd have her taught how to cook and to sew her own clothes. I'd see that she learned something of art and music and how to paddle a canoe and put on a bandage.

I'd make her wear her hair in braids until we both got tired of it. But the day she cut her hair short she would become her mother's daughter—not mine.

I'd let her go out on her first date alone during her third year in high school, and I'd pray that the young ape who escorted her had buck teeth. (Don't spread your wings all at once, baby, you have to fly a long way.)

I'd want her to be as feminine as Eve and as witty as Becky their time to work with him. There are other ways of doing it—Mr. Hitler tried one himself—but the volunteer way is the American way. You can't draft or coerce a boy or girl into a summer camp—the best way is for them to be a part of a year-round group that goes together when summer arrives.

Third, it is not wise to set up groups of youngsters—either in camp or in year-round groups—as "underprivileged" organizations. It did not work out during depression days to pauperize youngsters by sending them outright to such places except as expert social workers found extreme poverty, malnutrition, etc. Boy Scout troops, for example, found it much better to arrange work opportunities, special fund-raising projects and other means of enabling the boys to help themselves to the full extent possible.

The Reason

WHY aren't more youngsters in these organizations? There is only one reason. There aren't enough adults willing to give up a few adult pleasures and activities to work with them. Boy Scout membership in this or any other area could double in the next six months if enough men would actually take a little time with boys. If there were enough sponsoring groups such as clubs, churches, lodges, and other adult organizations to back these groups of youngsters, the juvenile delinquency rate would crash downward. So far as I know, this is the only answer.

We already have the organizations, we already have the camps, we already have the finances to reach many, many more youngsters. The bottleneck is in the scarcity of men and women who realize that this is the solution and are willing to arrange some hours with the boys and girls of their neighborhood.

I hope this will clarify thinking on the attainments of currently operating youth agencies. I realize the importance of the home situation today, but have purposely avoided its mention here in order to reply to the inference stated above.

The World Today

By J. M. ROBERTS JR. AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Just as Russia's actions in the recent New York conferences seemed to reduce the barriers between her and the western nations, so something seems to be happening to alleviate the fears of her immediate neighbors.

Some months ago Iran was reduced to a quivering jelly while her dispute with Russia was before the UN security council. She practically repudiated her own representative here, and made a hurried deal with the Soviet rather than pursue the contest despite indications of victory.

Now, suddenly, the Tehran government is emboldened to re-take the northern province of Azerbaijan which had been almost a country unto itself, because of wartime Russian occupation and later because of a Moscow-inspired local government.

In addition, Tehran's troops are mopping up centers of the Kurdish independence movement which also was declared by some of its own leaders to have had Russian support even to the supply of arms.

Iran moved without fear of Russian intervention. Even the Moscow radio has had little to say.

A little farther west, Turkish officials have begun a campaign against what they termed "subversive" elements in European Turkey. The army is moving in firm fashion.

In Greece, too, the government has consistently intimated that Russia was behind her insurgent troubles. But now one Greek partisan group, which was reported fighting for autonomy in Macedonia, denies this is their objective. They say they are fighting only for political rights and adoption of some of their precepts by the central government.

This group repudiates the leftist EAM and the Macedonian national liberation front, which the central government fears as the agents of Sovietized Europe.

Here, then, are three small groups which suddenly feel emboldened to thumb their noses at the Kremlin. Turkey, of course, has been firm all the time against Russian encroachment, but at the same time she has been, until now, very polite. And the Greek thing is minor.

But here, suddenly, we have evidence that the Kremlin frown does not carry all the weight it did a short time ago.

We can only speculate as to why, the same as we did about the recent softening of Russian policy in the UN.

Do the small neighbors know of events within Russia herself which hold her attention to the exclusion of matters outside her own borders? Foreign correspondents in Moscow report that the people of Russia have been one the other day which we're going to print in totum. It concerns Henry Morgan, the non-chalant slapper at radio commercials.

Questioned by his neighborhood psychiatrist after his ABC network broadcast last week, Henry Morgan finally revealed the reason he went into radio. He said he had always been seashore at home and homestead at sea, as Frank Sullivan once put it.

Morgan went on to assert that he had been a failure at home and abroad, a failure in Europe in the Near East and in the Orient. He stated unequivocally that he had learned from his playing fields of Kton.

"Finally I came back home and landed a job leading a blind ferret to rabbit holes. I did all right at that," said Morgan. "That proved that I was a failure as a failure. Naturally I went into radio."

His first job in radio, Morgan told his neighborhood psychiatrist was that of a page boy. He explained that the pay was so low that a number of his associates were forced to sell basketball games on the side. Without any production, he said, he had learned how to make a radio broadcast a failure. Naturally I went into radio.

"As a small child," said Morgan, "I was just about like other kids, with one small difference—I couldn't understand what my parents were talking about the ponies."

The nub of Morgan's point was that his parents objected to his forming a strong attachment for a Shetland pony they bought for him. "I hate to say this," he whispered, "but they're sorry now. That pony had a wonderful whinny. Always talking about him. And it was that whinny which convinced ABC executives that I was a natural for a network show."

At this point Morgan whinnied. The proper organization took a rating on his whinny and it showed that he had made 84.2, roughly about 27 points more than the average of the Louis and Billy Conn in their fight last June.

Well—maybe I was wrong, but it DID sound good at first.

Petrified Gavel Presented Speaker

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (AP)—Rep. Martin (R-Mass.), who will be speaker of the house in the session opening January 3 received today a gavel made of petrified wood said to be 15,000,000 years old.

The estimate was made by Rep. Holmes (R-Wash.), who made the presentation in behalf of Peter Tjossem of Ellensburg, Wash. Tjossem made the head of the gavel from the petrified wood and the handle from a walnut tree he planted when a child.

HIGH SCHOOL News Notes and Comment

By MARY O'BRIEN
As is traditional, the Girls' League held its Christmas assembly today, Wednesday, Lucille O'Neill, formerly of the teaching staff at KU, has given Christmas readings for the benefit of all the girls in past years and consented to do so again this year.

The four league advisers, Alice Howard, Louise Kelsey, Lyraine Fish, and Marie Bond, were presented with gifts by Girls' League president, Ruth Landry. Finally a skit, arranged as a radio broadcast of letters to Santa, was given by a group of students.

The small identification pictures taken last month were returned to school recently and sold today in an extended homeroom period this afternoon. If retained by the students, the cost was 35 cents for a dozen or 20 cents for half that many.

Performing for at least four events this week besides the cantata, the music department is fulfilling a heavy schedule. Yesterday the girls' glee club and the boys' double quartet performed at the Lion's club. Today the concert band played for the homestead drawing and a subsequent radio broadcast. Tomorrow the cappella choir will sing at Kiwanis. Giving a repeat performance, the choir will sing at the Rotary club Friday.

Last night Irma McBride acted as narrator for the "Divine Mystery" radio hook-up between 8:30 and 9:30. Other Script and Mike members have stints for the remainder of the week, but were relieved of the Pelicans broadcast this week because of the cantata.

Governor Gives Traffic Warning
SALEM, Dec. 18 (AP)—Governor Earl Snell today urged motorists to drive carefully during the Christmas holidays, pointing out that traffic accidents this year are 30 per cent more numerous than they were last year.

A big improvement has been made in a hearing aid now welcomed by thousands. This new one-unit aid is so light in weight you'll hardly know you're wearing it. Requires no separate battery pack, battery garment or case. Made so you can adjust it yourself to suit your hearing. The tone is clear and powerful. Remarkable new "X-Cell" retains full power up to 50 hours' continuous use. Eliminates altering batteries two or three times a day. Includes many other improvements for your comfort and better hearing. This war-born hearing aid development is being distributed in Oregon and southern Washington by James Taft and Associates who have offices in Portland, Salem, Eugene, and Medford. Taft and Associates have been serving the hard of hearing since 1934 and are highly recognized in this work. Mr. Mitchell's wide experience in the fitting of hearing aids, plus the many advantages offered in the new Bellone bids fair to bring new hearing hope to many in the Klamath Falls area.

Fishermen Fear Invasion

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (AP)—The "highest level" consideration has been asked of the state department by Pacific coast delegations regarding what they termed possible Russian encroachment on American fishing waters off the Alaska coast, Gov. Mervyn C. Wallgren reported today.

The Washington governor headed a west coast group yesterday in a 45-minute conference with Secretary of State Byrnes and Undersecretary Will Clayton.

Wallgren disclosed following the conference that he had related that Russian fishermen had moved in where Japanese had left off and that he feared old disputes between rival fishing groups may flare anew.

"We had our troubles with the Japanese and now the question may arise with the Russians as to how far they are to go and how far we can go," Wallgren said.

World Bank VP Resigns

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (AP)—Harold D. Smith, former budget director, has submitted his resignation as vice president of the World Bank, it was announced today. Smith has consented, however, to remain at his post pending appointment of a successor to Eugene Meyer, who also has resigned.

Meyer's resignation as head of the multi-million dollar institution became effective today. The bank's board of directors have not decided on a replacement for Meyer, owner of the Washington Post. The top spot in the bank pays $30,000 annually, tax free.
