New Pine Creek

The grange bazaar held last Saturday turned out to be an extraordinary affair, one of the largest of its kind ever held here, especially from a financial standpoint. Over $300 was grossed from all concessions involved, including dance and supper. Everyone had a grand time and many different people spoke of it as being one of the most congenial big crowds they had seen.

The grange is holding its annual Christmas party this Saturday night, which of course, is just for grangers and their families.

There will be a big New Year's Eve dance here Tuesday night, December 31, put on by the Willow Ranch union boys. The dance is to be held in the newly completed Gooch garage and is to be a union benefit dance, proceeds from which will go into the union building fund, and eventually will be used in erecting a new meeting hall, or town hall at the mill town. Such a building has long been needed in Willow Ranch and the benefit should be a worthy cause that will be widely patronized. Some finishing work remains to be done in the garage but everything will be in readiness for the big occasion. Music for the affair will be furnished by the East Grange orchestra, augmented by an extra instrument or two. Gooch will officially open his garage for business right after New Year's although some emergency work will be taken care of in the meantime.

The Happy Hour club held its last meeting of the year last Tuesday evening at the Grange hall in the form of an annual Christmas program, a quiet and exchange of gifts among members and their families. In connection they celebrated the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Vincent.

A U-shaped table was beautifully decorated with cedar in bloom and poinsettias. Place-cards of golden bells were used at each plate and a large golden bell was passed around for all present to sign. There was the traditional three-tier wedding cake and President Ruby Parin presented the club gift to the honored couple of a large golden vase. Mrs. Vincent's Secret Pal gave her a corsage and boutonniere. The girls serving at the table were Helen Sanford, Frances Hallinan and Mildred McLain.

There were 50 persons present. The next meeting will be January 7 with Mrs. Louise Miller at the home of Mrs. Gladys Porter.

Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Cloud returned last Thursday after spending a week visiting with their son, Ernest Cloud and family in Vallejo. They also spend some time in San Francisco on business.

"Music Of The Spheres" Is Explained By Astronomer

By J. HUGH PRUETT
Astronomer, Oregon General Extension Division

When we contemplate a clear night sky, artistically set with its myriads of twinkling stars of many degrees of brilliancy, and note how the entire crystalline sphere turns smoothly westward, do we not sometimes feel that intertwined in all this perfect order and harmony there is something closely akin to exquisite music?

Many of the ancient peoples believed that harmonious sounds were actually present in the starry heavens. Some worked out definite relations between the movements of the planets and their music. From this has come the expression, "the music of the spheres."

The noted Grecian, Pythagoras (6th century B. C.), taught that as the planets "in order bright" swing through the firmament, they emitted clear and pure musical notes. Since the note of each depended upon its speed—and this in turn upon its distance—he felt that the spacing of these heavenly bodies was perfectly arranged, for the combination of the notes produced splendid harmony; indeed, a symphony so majestic as well-nigh to surpass human comprehension. The slower-moving planets were thought to produce the bass, the pitch increasing with the greater remoteness of the body.

The Pythagoreans reasoned thus: The sounds produced by the planets in motion are extremely loud, but they are not notice harmony. Why do we not hear them since birth, that we are no more conscious of their vibrations than is a coppersmith of the din he produces. The seven planets (sun and moon included) are the seven strings of the heavenly lyre which gives us this beautiful "harmony of the spheres." It is a heptachord. The sphere of the fixed stars furnishes an eighth.

This notion was generally held even to the time of the astronomer Kepler (about A. D. 1600), who, knowing that any one planet varied somewhat in speed, wrote several notes as the contribution of each. To Saturn he assigned the deep bass, the east, with all her celestial attendants glorious in the pre-dawn sky, we may in fancy declare that the "morning stars sing together." But poetical figures aside, surely the adherents of the faith of the ancient Pythagoreans would rate us as unbelievers. How much more easily can we subscribe to the beautiful lines of Phillips Brooks:

"Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by."

Scientists used to say the earth was gradually cooling. Now they don't know whether it is cooling off or getting hotter.
