

Gene Rambo Cops Top Honors For Cowboy Champ

SALINAS, Calif., Jan. 8 (AP)—Gene Rambo of Shandon, Calif., today was named all-around rodeo cowboy champion for 1946 by the International Rodeo association.

Rambo won the cowboy championship with a total of 6714 points, topping by only eight points the total amassed by Bud Linderman of Red Lodge, Mont.

For his top honors Rambo wins the association's $1000 cash award, a gold and silver belt buckle and a $350 silver-mounted saddle.

In announcing the championship awards, Fred S. McCargar, association secretary of Salinas, said Rambo and Linderman ran neck and neck in the scoring until January 1, but in the final listings from delayed returns Rambo went into the lead.

Carl Mendes of Visalia, Calif., won the award that goes to the holder of the 25th place in the final standings, beating out Dan Poor who scored three points too many for No. 25 in the scoring.

Other winners:

Bronc riding—Jerry Ambler, 4070 points; awarded $1000 trophy by Seiznick International studio. Second, Bill Macklin.

Bull or steer riding—Dick Griffith, 2434 points; awarded $200 trophy; second, Glen Tyler.

Barback riding—Bud Linderman, 2678 points; awarded $100 trophy by Western Horseman of Reno; second, Wag Blessing.

What's the Difference?

ALMOST daily someone asks one of our people: "Just what is the difference between beer and ale? The thousands and thousands who have come to prefer our Columbia Ale recognize a difference. They can taste it. And there is a natural curiosity as to what accounts for it.

The primary element which accounts for the distinctly different effect so many sense, and enjoy, in Columbia Ale is the distinctly different method of fermentation employed in its brewing.

In the fermentation of beer a type of yeast commonly known as "bottom yeast" is used. This, as the name implies, rests at the bottom of the tank and the fermenting action is from the bottom upward. In the case of ale the reverse is true. A highly-cultured yeast of a "surface" or "top-type" is used. This yeast floats buoyantly at the top of the tank and the fermenting action is from the top downward, rather than the bottom upward.

This distinctly different method of fermentation is primarily the difference between beer and ale and accounts for the light, smooth "texture" so many have recognized in Columbia Ale.

If you have never tried a bottle of Columbia Ale, why not do so next time you drop into your favorite tavern? Or better still, take a few bottles home and enjoy one before dinner, during the evening or at bedtime. You'll find it pleasing in taste, moderate in content and thoroughly wholesome. And, just as thousands of others have done, don't be surprised if you acquire a distinct preference for this distinctly-different beverage.
