

Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY
We spent part of yesterday afternoon and evening attending a meeting of the steering committee of the Klamath Potato Growers association...

EPLEY

Without going into an account of troubles that beset the industry, we will say that many of these arise from steady expansion that has occurred over recent years...

What interested us was the spirit of the discussion. It was strictly on the constructive side. While there was much consideration of steps to be taken to move potatoes that do not meet the usual high standards of the Klamath crop...

A cooperative program to prevent the recurrence of disease and pest conditions was outlined. Methods that have been used, such as roguing and dusting, were discussed at length...

One grower made the comment that "our main idea shouldn't be to work out methods of disposing of inferior spuds; it should be to grow more and more superior ones."

It was clear that the growers recognized that conditions change as an area grows older in the potato growing business, and that the men engaged in the business have more than mere responsibility to themselves to help work out the new problems as they arise.

Disaster And Red Cross

SOME time ago, a letter appeared on this page that may have led to some misunderstanding of the functions of the Red Cross. The letter asked what the Red Cross was doing for the Pete Munday family, which lost its home in a fire.

The writer's inquiry was no doubt prompted by his knowledge of the disaster work done by the Red Cross.

While such situations as that of the Munday family may properly be considered a disaster from the standpoint of individual families concerned, the Red Cross does not undertake disaster relief operations in situations involving less than five families.

If no other means affording help is available, the Red Cross may undertake it as an emergency measure. This, of course, was not the case with respect to the Munday family.

We present this explanation to prevent any unjust criticism of the Red Cross growing out of the letter which appeared here.

News Behind The News

By PAUL MALLON
WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—General Marshall raised his right hand, and pleasantly stepped into the bedlam of international politics as if he expected to enjoy it. A cool diplomat standing at the fringe of the oath ceremonies, observed half to himself that the director of the war armies was entering a new type of warfare which promised the greatest challenge to reason and reasonableness...

The World Today

By VERN HAUGLAND AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Puerto Rico's Governor Jesus T. Piñero says the island territory is looking to its 60,000 war veterans to lead it into an industrial economy. Piñero, visiting in Washington, said in an interview: "We cannot survive on agriculture alone. We are on the verge of beginning a vast vocational education program, starting with our veterans—with the aid of the veterans administration and the department of education."

He pointed out that Puerto Rico suffers from chronic unemployment and said at least two-thirds of its people live just above the starvation level. But, he continued: "Our young men were cured of their diseases and well fed in the services, and they have returned with an unusual zest and spirit. Many of them are trying to get their eighth grade diplomas, and we hope to give all a chance to educate and train themselves to the level they desire. We are counting heavily upon their help in our efforts to bring industries to Puerto Rico."

The industrialization effort already has started in a modest way, Piñero says. The new enterprises include: A second cement plant, erected by private industry, to supplement a government-built plant.

A glass factory to manufacture all the bottles it needs for its major product, rum. A paper-board factory, manufacturing containers from cane fiber.

A shoe factory. A clay products factory. Puerto Rico also has decided to introduce modern fishing methods and Piñero says he sees Puerto Rico as the principal trans-shipping point for goods from the United States to the Caribbean area and Central America "as soon as we can get the shipping."

The swarthy former dairyman predicts that the island will produce more than 1,000,000 tons of sugar this year—"but we're keeping our fingers crossed as to whether there will be strikes." Piñero says the Puerto Ricans ground (Socialist Ramadier). The communists and anti-communists just about held their own, neither being able to acquire a majority, so the government went to a compromise leadership demanded by the communists. The outcome appeared plainly to any outsider such a direct challenge to popular will as to suggest it was conceived by those who may have wished to defeat rather than meet popular demand.

Amazing Decision

NOW Ramadier immediately planned to give to communists the cabinet post—credible as it sounds—of national defense. The communist party is dominated by a foreign power as everyone knows. The plan therefore primarily had the implication of delivering leadership of the army to devotees of a foreign power, of permitting national defense to be operated by domestic agents of a foreign revolutionary movement opposed to the very strivings of the French for freedom.

An American counterpart would be for Marshall to deliver the American army to communist leadership. Of course the proposal was then foolishly being contrived by Ramadier to give an appearance of disbelief to what he proposed to do, by adding three undersecretaries of other parties—under the communist leadership, mind you—to the national defense ministry. There was nothing deep-dyed or doubtful about this understanding of the matter. The only thing deep-dyed about it was that authorities did not seem to want to talk about it aloud or analyze it truthfully in public. Everyone wanted to pretend it was not so.

Now Marshall has nothing directly to do with the corruption of French popular will, but he will have something to do about the Spitzenberg base matter which is on the same plane. The Soviet press (government) is currently whipping the United States with adjectives, for objecting to Russian claims for an airbase from Norway on the top world arcs across which any directed missiles would fly to our land (3000 air miles to Pennsylvania and Ohio, they say). Pretending to be reasonable, it accuses the United States of having taken bases for itself in the Pacific, thus planning to embarrass Marshall.

Misused Phrase

A FRIEND of mine was saying the other day the commonest yet most misused phrase in all languages is "I think." People say it, but do not do it. The slightest effort toward reasonable thought on this matter must show that the American bases were those taken from a defeated enemy, Japan, while Russia is trying to take one from an ally, Norway.

This nation cannot even get any bases from allies like the British or French who have islands in the Pacific, or in Iceland where communists objected. A counterpart of the wholly ridiculous Russian position would be if we demanded bases from the British and belligerently pressed such a claim in violation of treaties (Spitzenberg is neutral ground by the treaty which Russia is trying to break). Not only that, but Russia actually owns islands nearby which could be used as bases (and perhaps are). You can write your own conclusion as to what the incongruous Russian position indicates as to her state of mind now and hereafter.

Practically everything else Marshall is facing is on the same level of intelligence. The Polish election last Sunday was such a travesty on the indispensable basic purpose of elections—for people freely to express their will—that the state department has formally protested, the Polish anti-communists planned to go to their supreme court and the accounts of all trained American news observers ridiculed the election. I would not bother reading what Stalin is supposed to have told Elliott Roosevelt, since I read earlier Elliott's attack on the American embassy in Moscow or its officials. But I guess this is not my real reason. I simply know that what Stalin may tell an American newsman is not what Russia does.

The same point I am making — of the difficulty of dealing internationally in bedlam—has even displayed itself behind the news from Britain. An official note was sent from Whitehall to Moscow denying an accusation in the Moscow press (government) that Britain was severing her mutual peace pact with the Soviets. A note was sent to deny a press dispatch: If Marshall meets this situation with customary military training inspirations, he will probably do a defense job primarily at the outset. He will first contrive adequate diplomatic defenses against this sort of attack.

Fire Department Answers Two Calls
The city fire department answered two calls Tuesday afternoon and small damage was reported in both cases. A call from 9th and Pine brought the truck that corner where a Western Oil Burners company oil truck motor was reported on fire.

The second call came at 7:45 p. m. from 2348 Vine, where a floor furnace was reported on fire. The owner was given as Doris Sealey.

that are springing up at the edges of the town, where parking space is still ample.

SAN FRANCISCO, of course, is a parker's dilemma. So far as the city itself is concerned, a car is simply a headache. You can't go anywhere in it, for there is no place to leave it.

The parking garage under Union Square was a splendid idea, but is actually not of much practical help. It is only a drop in the bucket as compared with the demand for places to park.

The city is now seeking to interest private capital in developing similar parking facilities under Portsmouth Square, Washington Square and the little park in Chinatown. But these will be merely other drops in a bucket, whose size is steadily expanding.

The future, you see, has about as many problems as there are ants in an anthill. Whatever may come to his efforts, Governor Warren is to be commended for prodding the people of California into thinking of their problems. Problems are seldom solved without a lot of thinking.

Traffic problems (including parking) are not peculiar to California. They are common to all the states.

Dick Miller Named To Directors

Dick B. Miller, local automobile dealer, was elected to the board of directors of the chamber of commerce at Wednesday noon's directors' meeting. He succeeds H. P. Bosworth, who resigned because of a move to Medford.

Miller has served on a number of chamber committees, including chairmanships, and has been an active leader of the merchants property holders group which has been interested in the cross-town traffic problem.

President John Houston announced that Malcolm Epley will serve as director in charge of roads and highways in a re-assignment of jobs in connection with the directorship change. Epley has been serving on the roads committee.

The chamber board approved a United States chamber of commerce declaration of policy favoring a re-scrutiny of the wage and hours law with a view to clarification and improvement.

Mayor Ed Ostendorf reported that the city airport commission and United Air Lines had come to an agreement regarding proposed fees for turning on landing lights for the night UAL flight. He said it was decided not to charge the fee, but United will try to arrange an earlier schedule which will eliminate the necessity of using the lights.

Plans were discussed for the sales tax forum to be held by the chamber at the Willard hotel January 29. Morton Tompkins, master of the state grange, will be asked to speak, or send a representative, to represent the Valley hospital today suffering from burns received late Tuesday night in a fire at the L. F. Spencer home near Tulelake which took the life of her 3-year-old step-brother, Thomas Franklin "Tommy" Spencer.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer remained at their daughter's bedside and said today that it was "touch and go" during the night for Peggy. The girl, student at Tulelake high school, was born in Osceola, Ark., January 5, 1932. She came here with her parents in September of last year, when the Spencers moved from Jonesboro, Ark., to be near Mrs. Spencer's brother, Bill Shuffelbarger, of Tulelake.

Mr. and Mrs. Lane Magee of San Francisco, old friends of the family from Jonesboro, arrived Wednesday night to be with the Spencers and to attend final rites for Tommy on Wednesday at 2 p. m. from the Tulelake Presbyterian church with the Rev. Hugh Bronson officiating. Interment will take place in Klamath Memorial park. Pall bearers will be John Day, Elmer Prince, Herman Jones and Lane Magee, all close friends of the family.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Willie Goes to School at 23
Everybody's joking Willie Wells about going back to school. They remember when Willie would hide out in the woodshed—scared to bring his report card home to Pa. But under the G.I. Bill of Rights, Willie (who has a wife and baby) is getting a free education at the Agricultural College. And Uncle Sam is giving him a fine report: "Department, excellent; Progress, above average."

That goes for all those undergraduate veterans. Like Willie, they appreciate an education more than ever now. They're industrious and well-behaved—their favorite beverage is milk, or a temperate glass of beer. For them the "three R's" seem to mean: Responsibility, Resourcefulness, Restraint.

From where I sit, cynical folks who thought veterans wouldn't want to return to school—wouldn't stick to steady habits of work and moderation—have their answer in "undergraduates" like Willie.
