Concert Said Big Success

Bidu Sayno, "glamor girl of the Metropolitan Opera," enchanted Klamath music lovers last night when she sang from the stage of the Pelican theatre, the last concert of the season sponsored by the Klamath Community Concert association.

The petite Brazilian soprano, prima donna of the "trills and arsis," was most generous with her encores, responding first with the lovely old favorite, "Last Rose of Summer," followed by "Hate Music," "Venetian Serenade," and finally, the aria from "Madame Butterfly." Typically Latin in looks, Bidu Sayno was pretty by every international standard and one of the most glamorous of the girls to grace the local stage.

Probably the most popular number on last night's formal program was the role of Violetta in "La Traviata." In this role as in others, the lovely little soprano provided the rare combination of personal glamor and fine musicianship. In her extraordinary and impressive recital, the brilliant singer scored a triumph with an excellent program that sent an enthused audience home with treasurable recollections of one of the most inspiring artistic experiences of the season which has now drawn to a close. For sheer beauty of voice and singing, charm of personality and ability to act, even injecting a bit of comedy in one of her encores, the prima donna had jewels in her voice as well as those she wore.

Her accompanist, Milne Charnley, was splendid and aided materially in the enjoyable evening. Three solo numbers were given by Mr. Charnley to round out the perfect program.

To Portland—Mrs. David Bridge and her daughter, Jody, returned to Portland this week after a brief visit at their home in Tulelake. They are residing temporarily in Portland where Jody is receiving medical treatment.
