

Flowers In Klamath Experience Shows That Wide Variety Grow Here

(Ed. Note: This is the first of a series of two articles prepared by Mrs. W. P. Myers of Lakeshore Gardens nursery and presented at a meeting of Faculty Wives club recently at Fremont school.)

Flowers are grown for two purposes: for outside adornment and cut flowers for inside decoration. Some flowers lend themselves readily for both uses. The tall-growing annuals, such as gladiolus, snapdragons, salpiglossis, asters and spring flowering bulbs make a grand display along the garden path, as well as choice cut flowers for inside arrangement, while the smaller types, such as sweet peas, achillea, godita, pinks, pansies and forget-me-nots make exquisite bouquets for medium and miniature display.

Growing flowers in Klamath Falls is not an experiment now as it was 24 years ago when I first came here. It was then considered a hazard to attempt to grow anything except the most hardy types of flowers, but now we know that we can successfully grow most of the flowers offered in the seed catalogues. However, care must be exercised as to time of planting, so as to avoid the late frosts.

Our planting season here begins later than in lower altitudes. Some annuals, such as sweet peas, asters, goditas, clarkia, larkspur, salpiglossis and scabiosa may be planted outside as soon as the ground can be worked. They are hardy and resist late frosts. Cold weather does not seem to hamper the germination of the seeds. I have frequently noted their coming up in the spring when their seeds laid out all winter after falling on the ground in the fall.

Zinnias, marigolds, balsam, nasturtiums and other easily frosted varieties should not be planted out of doors until late May when the danger of freezing is past. They germinate quickly and are fast growers, so do not take as much time to flower as many other varieties do. Should they freeze back, replant them immediately and you will still have a profusion of blooms in August, and until frost kills the plants.

Climatic conditions differ each year, but nature sets the time to plant—when the weeds begin to appear and maple trees to bud, you know the ground is warming up and it is time to start planting.

April showers bring spring flowers is always true in colder climates. The spring rains melt the snow and warm the soil so that spring flowers soon appear. Some years flowers come much earlier than April. It was in February and March, 1894 and 1895, that I remember seeing the prairies of western Oklahoma literally covered with what we called "wind-flowers"—a daisylike small anemone in all the pastel shades of blue and pink to white, producing a fairytale effect on the landscape. These charming little flowers seem to have disappeared with the coming of civilization.

The propagation of annuals is sometimes difficult for the amateur gardener. I would suggest that if you have trouble in getting seeds to come up, buy the growing plants from the greenhouse and get an early start by transplanting them to your own garden. The cost is small as compared to the satisfaction of getting just what you want to create the desired effect.

The bedding plants which we find most desirable for balcony and window boxes are geraniums, petunias, verbenas, lobelia, ageratum, pinks and trailing ivy and myrtle. These are not generally used for cut flowers, but owing to their compact nature and constant blooming period are most desirable where perpetual blooming is required.

Petunias and lobelia require so much time to germinate that they should be planted indoors in February or March to be ready for boxes in May. I find it easier to buy them from the store when needed. There are three places which handle all kinds of annual and perennial flower plants: Klamath greenhouse, Murphy's Seed store and the Market Basket, 600 Market street.

Largest and most expensive library in the world is the Library of Congress. Its original cost was $7,000,000.

Murder Trial Witness Heard

MEDFORD, Ore., April 24 (AP)—The trial of Forrest Wilson, 30, on a first degree murder charge in the poker-game slaying of John B. Camden, 36, Seattle, continued today after a witness had identified Wilson as the gunman in the hold-up.

Orville K. White, who said yesterday he had conducted the game last November in partnership with Louis G. Chambers, testified he was near the door when the robber thrust a gun through the door and said, "this is a scattergun."

White said the gun went off immediately and that he struggled with the gunman but was unable to hold him.

Six other witnesses previously gave details of the game but none positively identified Wilson. The state claims the defendant played, left the game, and returned for the hold-up.

Highway Commission To Finish Paving

PORTLAND, April 24 (AP)—The state highway commission advised a delegation from Enterprise yesterday it was prepared to finish the less than a mile section of road linking that community with Lewiston, Ida.

Work will begin when the U. S. forest service share of the project is allocated, the commission said. A street widening and bridge project at Willamina, to cost $40,000, was denied the city.

TRAVEL ALMANAC FOR MOTORISTS APRIL 24-30

Idaho's Rainbow Trout will get a rousing reception this week at the little city of Sandpoint on U. S. 95 in the northern part of the state. This year, as in the past, the red hatted citizens of Sandpoint will celebrate the opening of the Kootenay Rainbow Trout season with a week-long festival of special events.

Trout, a dainty fish and a mighty riser, will be in the limelight all over the West about this time of year. Like Waltons, from every walk of life, will soon be wetting Royal Coachmans, Picket Pins, Buddy Mitts and countless other varieties of wet and dry flies in streams all over the Northwest.

The flash of the rainbow trout is perhaps one of the greatest of fishing thrills, but other fish are equally popular and plentiful in this region. Bass, perch, chub, catfish, and many other finny favorites rise to bait in the fresh water streams of this fisherman's paradise.

Salmon fishing is another leading outdoor sport during the spring and summer months. Salmon derbies are held in a number of Puget Sound cities each year, and of course the big event of each is Derby Day.

The angler can find plenty of interest in Idaho, Washington, and Oregon. Stream waders, lake fishermen, or salt water enthusiasts will find plenty of sport in the waters of the Northwest.

When you pack up the car for that first fishing trip, we'd like to suggest a full tank of the new Richfield higher octane gasoline. The extra power in this great new motor fuel will make your trip a greater pleasure.
