BUTTE VALLEY and Swan Lake are two areas which reclamation surveyors are looking over in connection with the study of possible land use in the Klamath basin.

It is too early for conclusive information on these areas, but the work that is being done is most interesting. It must include, among other things, the suitability of the land for development, the potential return, and most important of all, the possibility of economic delivery of water to the soil.

The survey will be inclusive of the entire Klamath drainage area, when it is concluded, and will form a basis upon which this region will go forward toward its destiny as an expanding producer of food for the Pacific coast.

Butte Valley

THE Butte valley study has contemplated the possibility of a lift of about 200 feet from Lower Klamath lake into the Butte valley area, where the water can be used to irrigate possibly 60,000 acres of good land.

An interesting possibility is the development of power from this drop, which it looks as if might be equivalent to the power required, on the other end, to lift the water from Lower Klamath into Butte valley.

Swan Lake

SEVERAL sources of irrigation for Swan lake are being studied.

One idea is to deliver water through a tunnel from the Algoma area on the east side of Upper Klamath lake.

Another possibility would be to take water through a canal from the Upper lake to Oleno, using some facilities already constructed, and pumping it there into a high ditch that would serve Swan lake.

Still another scheme would be to take water back from Klamath river through the diversion canal to the diversion dam (Wilson dam), pump it into the forebay of that dam and back it up to Oleno, where it could be pumped into a ditch to serve Swan lake.

The big problem, of course, is whether it can be done with reasonable expectancy of sufficient return to justify the original outlay and the continuing operation expense.

Purpose

OUR purpose today is not to give specific and conclusive information, but rather to give an idea of the character of the investigations that are under way by the reclamation bureau.

It should be kept clear that the engineers are engaged, primarily, in determining what use can be made of the available water in the Klamath basin, so this water can be reserved for these purposes when the time comes to release them.

Well remembered is the vigorous battle offered here when a proposal was made a few years ago to deliver Klamath basin water to the Central Valleys project. It was realized then that we had to know, specifically, what good uses can be made of water here, so that we could protect ourselves against efforts to raid this vital supply.

That is why the reclamation survey is so important to us.

THAT was a grand banquet which Prime Minister T. Stalin gave in the Kremlin to mark the conclusion of the deadlocked four-power conference, and his toast to the health of President Truman was an impressive gesture.

One would like to be able to add that this marked the wind-up of the doubts and suspicions and other differences which have been marring the relations of Russia and the western democracies. But when you search for something on which to pin your hope, you don't find it.

They frequently refer to Stalin as the sphinx of Moscow, because he is a man of so few words. And indeed as your columnist tries to extract any helpful sign from this banquet and courteous toast, he has the identical feeling he has experienced when standing before the great Egyptian sphinx in the Sahara outside Cairo.

The banquet was perfect—as a banquet. But absence of hope, which should mark a conference of the Big Four, but so far as one can judge from this dinner, there was no sign which could be taken for guidance in the future. The banqueters shook hands—and went their divers ways without knowing whether the world is heading into another whirlwind or whether we can have peace.

Riddle To Solve

AND that, my friends, is exactly the riddle we have to solve. The next conference has been fixed for November in London, although the Big Four foreign ministers may get together briefly in September if all of them are in New York for the meeting of the United Nations assembly.

From the standpoint of the western allies, of course, the riddle resolves itself into the question of whether Russia really wants peace or whether she is bent on encircling the globe with communism and making Moscow the capital of the world.

Russia's answer to this is that the western democracies, and especially the United States, are trying to encircle the Soviet Union and render it impotent.

If the suspicions of either camp are true, then another world upheaval is likely due course—not in 1945, but maybe ten or fifteen years hence, when the powers have recovered from the strain of the last conflict. If the suspicions are unfounded, then we can have peace. It will be a matter of dispelling the suspicions.

She was someone in history. As the number of prizes grew each day a new contestant was asked the question and failed, so did the number of calls to the Chicago public library, finally reaching a peak of 1200 in one day, all asking about Grace Bedell. The institution had a staff of researchers at work trying to find the answer, but finally out of desperation they called the producer of the show and asked him, Grace Bedell, who lived here, was the little girl who owned her name to a letter she wrote. It was to Abraham Lincoln suggesting that he would look better with a beard, which he grew within a year.

Juvenile Home Talked By County, City Officers

An important meeting to discuss the treatment and housing of youngsters who have drawn the adverse eye of the law, was held Friday by the juvenile court committee with Judge U. E. Reeder and the county.

The possibility of developing a decent place with educational and recreational facilities and a homelike atmosphere, for children waiting disposition or transfer to state homes, was the highlight of the session.

The inability of the state of Oregon to keep pace of the need for institutional care of dependent and delinquent children, was pointed out, placing more and more responsibility on the counties.

Although the foster home program still carries a large bulk of the responsibility, the committee, headed by Mrs. M. P. Leonard, emphasized the need for a local program that would be profitable for the children themselves.

The county court was very receptive to the idea. "These are our children and we want to take care of them ourselves, not shoot them off to some distant place to be experimented on," Judge Reeder stated, asking the committee to cooperate in investigating local possibilities.

One suggestion was to try to get cooperation from the county health unit. It is a long-range program, according to the judge, with a hope of getting a place where a really useful plan could be inaugurated, to help straighten out problems of the children so that within a limited time they could be returned to their own home. A point which was emphasized at the meeting was the lack of state funds to carry on essential plans to curb juvenile delinquency in Klamath county. Cooperation of civic groups and individuals is imperative to make the program workable, the judge pointed out.

"Cash investment in our own youngsters will bring invaluable returns," Judge Reeder said sincerely, "and Klamath county residents can help promote this practical plan by contributing cash donations, time and services."

Sitting in on the meeting were Mrs. H. P. Boush, Mrs. E. P. Ellington, Mrs. Warren G. Nogle, Mrs. George Massey, Rev. Howard F. Hutchins, Sam Smith, Harold Hendrickson, Lynn Roycroft, Arnold Gralapp, Mrs. Leonard and Judge Reeder.

Beauticians Convention Opens Here

Mrs. Rose Poole, state legislator from Klamath, who has given outstanding service to Oregon's beauticians, presiding over the convention, providing the feminine viewpoint on these problems to the house of representatives, will be an honored guest during the convention and will give the main talk at the "fun" meeting of Sunday evening at the Log Cabin.

Activities open Sunday with registrations at convention headquarters in the Willard hotel, following the luncheon and entertainment in the evening at the Log Cabin when a "blind" comb-out will be the most hilarious part of the program.

Business sessions and Ricardo's hair styling lessons will take up the entire day of Monday, with special activities being resumed at an evening dinner to be served at the Willard when operators from throughout the state will compete in the hair styling contest.

Business meetings will continue on the final day, Tuesday, with election of new state officers taking place in the afternoon, to be climaxed by a "Grand Ball" on Tuesday night in the Willard's banquet room during which newly elected officers will be introduced and cups presented to award winners.

Ethel "Storm" Borden, president of the Klamath unit, is state general chairman for the convention, assisted by the entire Klamath membership, including the following committee chairmen: Margaret Kiplinger, publicity; Len Merd and Nona Roberts, housing; Muriel Garich and Irma Shearer, entertainment; Steve Peters, hair dressing events of the Klamath beauticians; Mrs. Borden, president, are Margaret Kiplinger, vice president; Fern Short, secretary; Mary Bellotti, treasurer, and Nona Roberts, sergeant-at-arms.

Lee GeRue has been in charge of preparing the clever background effects for the two outstanding events to be held in the Willard banquet room. All member shops of the Oregon association are remaining closed throughout Monday and Tuesday for the personnel to attend the convention.

Paine Thought Seen At Lake

LAKEVIEW, April 26.—The search for Alfred Paine, escaped San Quentin murder convict, swept into Lake county Wednesday when Mrs. Mae Deboy at Summer Lake told State Police Officer Walter Scheidreiter that the man had purchased gasoline from her that morning.

State and county police officers continued the search throughout the north part of the county today after a check with the California clearing station near Ukiah has failed to locate the pickup truck answering the description of the one driven by the man identified as Paine.

Fremont Roads Open But Muddy

The following information to fishermen is passed on by Merle S. Lowden, supervisor of the Fremont forest.

The road to the south fork of the Sprague, toward Finley corral, is open but very muddy. Roads from Bly south are bad.

Sycan road from Silver lake down is open, but other to Sycan are impassable. Most roads in the forest are still very muddy and not recommended for travel.

Phone Lines Sabotaged

CINCINNATI, April 26.—Three telephone lines in the Cincinnati area were damaged early today, the Cincinnati and suburban Bell Telephone company reported, affecting press and government wires and 35 per cent of long distance service from Cincinnati to northern and western points.

The Cincinnati-Dayton, O. cable, which was severed last Thursday, was one of the lines affected in what a company spokesman described as "sabotage."

On the Cincinnati to St. Louis long-distance line, 30 wires were cut at neighboring Williamstown, Ky., and a local cable at nearby Chandler, Ky., also was damaged. These were repaired within an hour, the company said.

However, work crews still were searching for the break in the Cincinnati-Dayton cable, a spokesman said, adding that it was believed the damaged spot was in the vicinity of Lebanon, O. The line was hacked in the Maud, O. area Thursday.

Reward Offered In Sabotage

PORTLAND, Ore., April 26.—The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company offered a $1000 reward today for information on persons it accused of attempting to cut lines.

In a newspaper advertisement the company charged seven separate attempts were made between April 18 and 25 to interfere with service. In six of the attempts lead shavings on cables were cut, and on the seventh a sharp instrument was forced into a long distance cable, the company said.

Earlier, C. M. Bixler, president of the Telephone Workers union in Oregon, deplored the incidents and said he had advised union members not to attempt sabotage.
