In The Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS
THE navy announces today that it is setting up a special research section to try to develop atom-powered warships.

AT the same time, the new section would study methods of protecting ships against atomic weapons—including protection of the vessels and their crews against radio-active contamination ("radio-logical" contamination is the technical term used by the navy).

HERE are some interesting "ifs" in the future of naval warfare: Battleships designed to slug it out with enemy battleships may disappear (as the dinosaur disappeared). They may be succeeded by special ships, heavily protected against atomic and other attack, designed to move up to enemy bases and pound INLAND cities and industrial centers with huge ROCKETS — which, presumably, would carry atomic heads.

ACHIEVE carriers, as we know them now, may give way to "interceptor" ships carrying PILOTLESS aircraft designed to knock down enemy GUIDED missiles aimed at the United States.

SUBMARINES will probably play an enormously important part in future warfare, attacking up enemy coasts, surfacing and launching atom bombs at relatively near targets.

IF we have to have war in the future, it is going to be atomic. Rogers was with the atomic bomb when it was used in that war. It is a matter of time before an atom bomb does to people.

EVERYBODY is grateful for a loan WHEN HE GETS IT. When the time COMES TO PAY, he is less grateful. It's a fairly safe rule that the sure way to LOSE friends is to lend them money.

OUR relations with Mexico have always been bad. It hasn't been ALL Mexico's fault. We have always snooted Mexicans. We have called them "greasers," "spigotties," and other contemptuous names. We have taken a lot of territory from Mexico by conquest.
