Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

GENEROSITY of Klamath people for their schools was impressively demonstrated in yesterday's budget elections, which saw overwhelming approval for the increased financial programs of the city elementary district, Klamath Union high school district, and Klamath county school district.

EPLEY

Although a good case was made for the budgets, one should view the results of the vote in the light of the heavy burden of taxation which already rests on real property here, in order to realize the extent to which people here are going all out in support of the education program.

In the case of the Klamath Union high and city elementary budgets, there was a fairly strong "protest" vote, which needs to be fully noted by school authorities and budget boards in the future. Probably most of those who voted "no" on the budgets anticipated or even hoped they would pass, but felt that there should be some expression of conservation that would influence future fiscal decisions. There was such an expression, and there is need for such an influence.

* * * *

Light Vote

YESTERDAY'S vote, while the largest in volume in the last five years in which balloting on six per cent excess budgets has been held, was still disappointingly small. In the high school district, 342 persons voted, while in the city elementary district, 360 cast their ballots. (We have no final figures at this time from the county.)

This extremely small, considering the number of persons who live in the district and are qualified by property ownership to cast ballots on these issues.

Apathy here toward school budget issues is indicated in this table of figures on recent elections:

	Dist No. 1 Yes	Dist No. 1 No	Dist. No. 2 Yes.	Dist. No. 2 No
1942			61	21
1943	76	13	143	66
1944	131	39	46	8
1945	70	15	51	5
1946	223	51	155	33
1947	282	78	256	86

It will be seen from these figures that there has been a strongly approving vote all the way through, and probably the voting that has been done has been a fair sample of sentiment. But even so, it would be heartening to school authorities if more people showed enough interest to go to the polls and express themselves on these issues.

Outlook

ON the face of things, it appears that this year is the peak year in school finances.

Some of the levies which have been pyramiding toward this year will go off or decline in the near future. For example, $50,000 levied this year for the Mills addition improvement will not be found on next year's budget. Klamath Union high school is entirely out of debt, and the elementary district needs only one year more of budgeting to retire its present debt.

Special levies for reserves will appear only one more year under the present authorization.

All of this is encouraging in the outlook for a break for taxpayers in the future. Efforts being made through the state sales tax program may likewise help alleviate the heavy burden on real property.

News Behind The News

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 13—The republicans are receiving bad publicity even on their agreed plan to economize about one-seventh in the $37½ billion Truman budget, and their program to afford about one-fifth reduction to the taxpayers from the terrific wartime rates which are the most oppressive of all history.

You would think such moderate steps would be unanimously popular, but not under the game which the federal bureaucrat pressure group has built up in congress, making all this out to be something for the rich.

Their beguiling palaver which has absorbed the congressional debate, much print and a lot of air, runs like this: The republicans will never be able to save the $6 billion which the house demanded, or the $4½ billion which the senate demanded, or the $5¼ for which both houses are working. The house is cutting, but the senate is putting back. (Fact is the senate cut even more than the house in the labor-security appropriations, but is restoring some of the western irrigation and flood projects which the house eliminated from the interior bill. The house has cut $1.2 billion so far on about $15 billion of appropriations. You cannot tell yet how much the republicans will save, but they will probably fall short considerably of hopes.)

The reason the republicans cannot cut is because $11 billion must go for military and $5 billion for fixed interest charges. (The military is being cut 5 per cent and of course the government recaptures much of its interest payments by its taxes on government bond interest, so these factors are being incorrectly stated. But after defense and interest there remains $21 billion on which to whittle.

* * * *

Scaring Congressmen

ECONOMIZING is all a matter of opinion; if you want to cut the cultural radio program to Russia, all right, but every time you cut you must eliminate some government activity. (The truth is the Truman employees pressure group with the aid of the union congressmen, are scaring the daylights out of all congressmen, making them believe the world will not turn unless the bureaucrats get the money they want. Particularly their campaign is directed toward making republican congressmen fear for re-election unless all government privileges in their home districts are maintained. Thus has all government activity been made sacrosanct and indispensable.)

On taxes, the prevailing palaver holds: the republicans have too raw a help-the-rich bill and had to revise their middle bracket in the senate finance committee to make it look better. The republican tax program is all to help the rich and they must disguise it. (The rates deny this on their face, as they recede from 30 per cent reduction on the low incomes down to 10 per cent on large incomes. Furthermore, it is objectively true you cannot run a capitalistic system without capital, although Mr. Roosevelt tried to run it with government capital, incidentally deficit government capital. Yet capital can only be furnished by people who earn surplus money.)

* * * *

On Defensive

UNDER the pressure of this distorted propaganda, the whole republican program, in what seems to be a genuine public interest, has been put on the defensive in publicity before the public. They will no doubt effect it anyway. Whatever deficiency in economies may result from the pressure group scare-and-smear campaign on the difficulties of economizing—these will be more than made up by the discovery that the Truman-treasury budget estimates of last January are wrong already. The discovery was made by Colin Stam, a non-political actuary with the joint congressional committee who figures national income payments next year at $170 billion, $2 billion more than the treasury. Treasury is inclined to excuse itself by saying its estimates were made too early, but it has not altered its stand against economies or tax reduction in accord with the new figures. Government never curtails or changes. We still have here in government use, the temporary buildings erected for the first world war.

Thus do genuine attempts to bring the government mildly into some sort of reasonable postwar fiscal status, often meet with failure from the current Tobias Lears of national politics. The truth is Washington politics have always been able to stop every effort to lessen the tremendous and always increasing costs of government, now above three times higher than the spending Mr. Roosevelt ever dreamed.

UNNECESSARY EXPENSE

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—Buried in a lot of minor items in the middle of last night's paper was an item which merits some attention. It was a brief statement that the bureau of reclamation had let a contract to Harms Bros. for the construction of a scenic road between Keswick dam and Shasta.

At the present time there are perfectly good oil surfaced roads to both these structures, open to anyone who wishes to visit them. Of course it is a nice idea for people to be able to drive in to one then loop up the riger to the other. The privilege of sitting at ease on foam rubber cushions and viewing the wonders done by Ickes and Krug is one many people will undoubtedly enjoy. However, the farmer who is sweating it out on the bucket seat of a tractor trying to pay off the twenty or thirty thousand dollar irrigation bill on his hundred and sixty acres might not be so appreciative. Also, you and I sweating it out with the income tax bureau are paying our share, not to mention the hidden tax in the high prices we have to pay for everything.

Of course the $800,000-odd that the road will cost looks small against the background of the billions of the national budget. However, these billions are the accumulation of a vast number of comparatively small items. Unless we who pay the bills do something to check such wastes as we see them, we never can expect to have much economy in public projects, or government at large. Maybe congress wasn't so dumb at that when they cut USBR budget.

PARK NAME

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—I am honored by the suggestion of my friends that the proposed community park for this part of the city be named after me as suggested in a recent news story in your paper. The name suggested was "Wiard Memorial park," since the park will be located between Wiard street on which I live and Hope street. This park we hope to build in the memory of Klamath county pioneers.

However, I would like to suggest that other names be submitted either through the columns of your paper or to others of this community who are interested in the development of this playground for both children and adults.

Court Upholds Freight Boost

WASHINGTON, May 13 (AP)—The supreme court Monday upheld an interstate commerce commission order raising railroad freight rates 10 per cent in the north and east and lowering them 10 per cent in the south and as far west as the Rockies.

The commission ordered the changes after officials of southern states complained that higher rates in their region gave northern manufacturers competitive advantages.

Affected are so-called class rates. These apply principally to manufactured articles.

Justice Douglas wrote the court's 7-2 decision. It was read by Justice Burton in the absence of Douglas, who has been ill with a cold. Justices Jackson and Frankfurter wrote dissents.

The World Today

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Britain's conservative party, under leadership of former Prime Minister Winston Churchill, has made a surprising move which looks very much like swing to the left — a small swing, to be sure, but still a swing—in competition with the socialist government's program.

The conservatives have issued a booklet pledging themselves to work for restoration of "a wide measure of freedom" to some industries which have been nationalized. However, they say they have no intention of restoring the bank of England or the coal industry to private enterprise, and add this provocative forecast:

"We wish to substitute for the present paralysis, in which we are experiencing the worst of all worlds, a system of free enterprise, which is on terms with authority, and which reconciles the need for central direction with the encouragement of individual effort."

Whatever else one may think of this declaration, it is of course a bid for return to power in the next general election which normally will be three years hence.

The idea of "need for central direction" naturally catches the eye, and the conservative London Daily Express said the conservatives are making an elementary blunder in trying to fight under a socialist banner. The Daily Telegram, also conservative, thinks the conservatives aim at doing what the socialists are trying to do, on doing it better.

While this move is surprising, it isn't at all illogical. The conservatives are trimming their sails to a wind whose direction was clearly evident in the last general election when many of their party voted the socialist ticket.

Moving Cautiously

England has been moving cautiously but steadily toward moderate socialism for many years. We got striking evidence of this as far back as 1924 when the late Ramsay MacDonald headed the first labor government, which employed the terms "labor" and "socialist" as synonymous, just as is done today.

That the socialist victory which overwhelmed the great Churchill two years ago was no flash in the pan has been demonstrated in the numerous elections since then to replace individual members of parliament. The socialists haven't lost a single seat—a circumstance which is taken by the political experts in Britain as indicating that the general public still is determined to give the new government a chance to show its paces.

All this being so, it's clear that whatever party wins in the next general election will do so on a broad and progressive platform.

40-Hour Week For State

SALEM, May 13 (AP) — The state civil service commission is expected to announce late this week a five-day 40-hour week for state employes.

The commission met yesterday to consider the board of control's favorable recommendation on the subject, but the commission said that final announcement would have to wait until civil service rules are changed. It will take two or three days to change the rules, the commission said.

State employes now work 5½ days a week, and from 41 to 44 hours. The new ruling will result in many state offices being closed Saturdays, and with the other departments maintaining skeleton crews on Saturdays.

Grandad's Coypcats Date May 17

Grandad's Copycats originates in Redding, Calif., and several performers who previously lived in Klamath Falls, are billed for the Saturday night program.
