

Mystery Cloaks Woman In Resort Town Suicide Try

SEASIDE, June 5 (AP)—Still veiled in mystery is the full identity of Mrs. Elsie Church, the gray-haired woman who walked fully clothed into the ocean here May 29 and was rescued by a heroic Portland woman.

officer at the Seaside hospital, where her recovery is now believed certain. Mrs. Church said she was the widow of Richard Church, an amputee-veteran of World War I with whom she lived in Westchester, N. Y., until his death early in May.

Having no relatives or friends in the East, Mrs. Church said she flew to Portland about May 20 and stayed for a week at the Imperial hotel in the hope of locating old friends. Failing to find the friends, whom she did not name, Mrs. Church came to Seaside. She was rescued from the stormy surf on the afternoon of May 29 by Mrs. E. J. Kennelly, Portland, a guest at The Tides hotel here.

County authorities are attempting to check a clue to Mrs. Church's earlier history which came in a telephone call from a Portland woman Sunday.

The woman said she had known an "Ailsie Church" in Seaside many years ago and had lost touch with her after Ailsie Church moved to the East. A description offered by the Portland woman is said to tally in striking detail with the appearance of the hospitalized woman.

Red Cross and welfare workers of Clatsop county are planning to aid Mrs. Church, who is without money and clothing.

Three hundred armed citizens yesterday joined a posse of 200 state, county and municipal police officers in a 12-hour search for the fugitive.

Police Sgt. R. E. McMahon said a fiery cross was burned near a negro residential section last night and officers were investigating a report that white men threw a ball of flaming tar into a negro's home.

When deciding upon a future look to the navy for experience.
