Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY. SPEAKING to the Kiwanis club this week, C. W. Burningham, reclamation planning engineer, outlined the studies which point to the possibility of increasing the agricultural production of the Klamath basin by at least 50 per cent.

This can come through the expansion of irrigation over land that can be made highly productive if water is taken to it. The reclamation survey so far points to a possibility of an expansion of at least 100,000 acres.

Here is the greatest potential for economic growth of the basin community. We have already had a remarkable demonstration of what our area can do with proper development and use of a part of its water and land resources.

The purpose of the current survey is to determine what use can be made of a water resource which has been proved plentiful enough that covetous eyes were cast toward it by the Central Valley of California.

The point is that we have found we must make the fullest possible use of the water, commensurate with sound economy, or we are going to have trouble defending our contention that it must not be diverted elsewhere. That's a major reason the survey was started.

Markets. AND what about the markets? The Klamath basin lies at the door of one of America's rapidly expanding markets, a market into which it already has favorable freight rates and to which it already is shipping annually thousands of carloads of food.

California's population will grow by the millions in the next few years. The most conservative observers agree to that, and all you have to do to convince yourself is to drive through that state. These millions must eat, and here at the northern door of the state we have a country that has proved itself tremendously successful at producing food. The

SIDE GLANCES

It would be idle to talk about increasing our productivity if there were no place to dispose of what we produce profitably. But the place to dispose of it is itself expanding at a high rate.

The World Today

By FRANCIS W. CARPENTER. Associated Press Foreign News Analyst. (Substituting for DeWitt MacKenzie).

After months of saying "no," the Russians finally have a new and positive approach to the atomic problem.

It would not pay to become optimistic about it now. The deadlock on fundamental still exists. But at least there is a turn in the Russian thinking which has big possibilities.

It is simply this. The Soviet Union admits it might be possible to reach agreement on atomic control on the basis of the United States and Russian plans. Those are the only two big proposals that have been put before the United Nations atomic energy commission since it first met a year ago today.

Nothing Changed. EXPERTS who have looked twice at Gromyko's proposition of Wednesday realize that it changed exactly nothing in the broad and fundamental disagreement over the veto and national sovereignty of atomic matters. But they did see importance in the fact that Gromyko had enlarged upon his original plan, put before the delegates on June 19, 1946.

After the public pronouncement, Gromyko went before the working committee of the commission in a closed session Thursday and ripped into the United States for saying that the Soviet and American plans must be considered separately.

He said such thinking was "absolutely wrong," that "we should not leave any method aside before we consider it fully exhausted."

Then came this clincher from the Russian: "Both plans (American and Russian) must be considered simultaneously on their merits."

This caused the Americans some surprise. They had grown accustomed to Gromyko's hands-off attitude toward their plan, which had been written into the commission's first report by a majority of 10 of the 12 members. They are waiting now to see which way the wind will blow next.

This is a day for stock-taking on arms and atomics.

Year Ago Today. ONE year ago today Bernard M. Baruch, now sitting on the sidelines and keeping officially mute, presented the American plan, which calls for no veto on punishing atomic criminals and for an international atomic development authority with full powers over the atom everywhere.

The anniversary finds Russia still insisting on a convention prohibiting the atomic bomb immediately and a separate convention to be agreed upon later, setting up the controls. The Russians want the atomic regulations to come within the final authority of the security council, where they have a veto.

Six months ago today the UN general assembly approved unanimously a resolution calling for worldwide arms limitation and reduction and a cut in armed forces. Little progress has been made toward that goal.

Four months ago yesterday the security council established the commission for conventional armaments, which is to draw up recommendations for checking armaments and armed forces. So far, that commission has not even agreed on how to go about the job.

Everyone figures the job will be long. That is the one thing on which they are unanimous.

"My steady girl has gone away for the summer! I took this job to forget—and because my parents insist on me working!"

Odell Tragedy Still Probed

No trace of the two men who disappeared on Odell lake May 24 has been found although two navy men from Portland have been at the lake about 10 days carrying on a search.

The men are Harold Hadley and Leonard Callier. They disappeared while on a fishing trip in a small boat and are presumed to have been drowned.

Edouard Prialux of Chiloquin, whose cabin at Odell Hadley and Callier were using on the trip, returned from the lake today and said that the navy men had searched the shoreline and the water around where the men are believed to have gone down.

They have been searching for the motor which was lost off the boat, hoping to locate it in the water and in that way establish the location of the tragedy for further search for the bodies.

Two-Wheel Trailer Stolen Thursday. A two-wheel stake-body trailer was reported to the city police as stolen sometime Thursday night by Vernon J. Wirth, 132 Laguna.

The trailer was taken from his residence. It is painted black, has fenders and a ball hitch.

Also reported stolen last night was a motorcycle wheel and tire from a motorcycle sidecar belonging to Don Blake at 285 N. 2nd.

Only one moving violation was made last night. W. P. Brown, 304 1/2 S. 1st, was cited for having a motorcycle license. The license appeared in police court today, and $3 parking meter tickets were paid.

Non-Strikers Beaten At Ford Plant

DETROIT, June 14 (AP)—Four non-striking Ford Motor company foremen were beaten on their way to work and a new walkout hit the Continental Motors corporation Friday to mar an otherwise brighter auto industry labor scene.

Both developments came on the heels of a settlement involving 16,000 strikers and a new wage agreement.

Dearborn police said the foremen were dragged from their car and assaulted by three carloads of men about 6:30 a. m. while en route to the Ford Rouge plant.

Taken in a police scout car to the Ford first aid station were Emil Rose, Charles Kaufman, Ymar Polosari and Max Schmidt. Rose suffers head injuries, Kaufman and Polosari face injuries and Schmidt declined treatment.

Lt. Leonard Sikorski said there were at least 12 men in the three vehicles. They fled a few minutes before police arrived on the scene, and none of them have been identified.

Some 3700 Ford workmen, members of the Foreman's Association of America (independent), have been on strike for 24 days in a contract dispute.

Red Control Probe Asked

BUDAPEST, June 14 (AP)—The U. S. state department has asked American officials here to submit new information on Russian domination of the allied control commission for Hungary, an authority said today.

He added that Washington may have in mind a note in the Soviet Union protesting against what the Americans regard as arbitrary and one-sided actions by the Russians.

Britain and the United States share places with Russia in the commission, but the Western powers' representatives have been unable to get much action over Russian opposition.

Here is the picture that should have headed this column yesterday. Maybe you have seen it before—KR's drawers, but it won't hurt you to see it again.

The studious Miss is the paying teller on "Break the Bank," the program I advised you to listen to yesterday. Must we wait for television?

Best advice for the day concerns the final broadcast of the Bing Crosby show. Der Bingle must stay for about 13 weeks and is going to say "hasta manana" with a lavish splurge of entertainment. His special guests will be Bob (ski nose) Hope and golfer Jimmy Demarest.

So if you want the latest round of the Hope-Crosby insulting contest (and, also, if you too would like to find out who Jimmy Demarest is) tune in at 9 p. m. Wednesday, June 18.

In addition to today's pix, KR's drawer yielded a view of the Lone Ranger. If anyone at all would like to see it, drop a line to me at The Herald and News. If there is sufficient response to this offer I'll dig up one of Tonto as well.

From far away New York came a letter today informing me, among other things, that Dorothy Lamour will take over Fred Allen's time slot beginning June 22. Hope's favorite brunette will emcee (get a firm grip on your chair) the army's new recruiting program. This is definitely taking an unfair advantage of the mail of the species.

On a more serious vein, be sure to tune in on the Boston "Pops" orchestra at 9 p. m. Tuesday, June 17. The program will be the eighth in the current summer series. So if you like good music, here is an hour of real listening pleasure.
