PALACE NEWS

by "Butch"

THIS WEEK we're renovating our continuous food festival headquarters and the Boss said, "Get rid of that oak barrel." So today we are going to tell you about a unique SPESHULL.

This SPESHULL is a oaken whiskey cask that came from Catskill County, Kentucky, long, long ago. It was shipped in here on the Po-ke-ga-ma Railroad and has been in our basement ever since.

Before we became its proud possessor it had been used for many years to age an old Kentucky bourbon and even now those who stick their heads in it for any length of time have to be driven home by a friend.

HIG SALTY tears are literally rolling down our cheeks as we offer you today's SPESHULL. In fact it is today's SPESHULL. This ink-stained wretch would come up with a blank for our advertising column more times than once. All we have to do now, when we can't think of things to tell you, is to slip down to the basement and stick our head in the whiskey cask for a few minutes. We've never failed to get a quick klick, so post! Please don't buy it.

BUT the Boss said, "Get rid of that oak barrel." So to be in keeping with it's honorable past if you're going to be an old meany and buy it we suggest as follows:

Set it on the proper platform held up by 4 rubber-tired casters. Put a shelf in its middle and cut a hole in its side large enough so you can put a few assorted 5hs on the shelf. Thus you have a mobile cocktail bar that will be good taste, in more ways than one, for any corner of your rumpus room.

PRICED at 2 bucks, but because the Boss would kinda like to sell it, we'd like $1.98. And from then on you can cut down on the cost of entertainment. Just have your guests stick their heads in the whiskey cask and spend the money you'll save on your liquor bills for our delicious T-Bones.
