Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

THE Weed child-beating case has plumbed the depths of human nature to disclose something ugly and almost unbelievable. That any adult would mistreat a tiny, helpless child, and abandon her—to die, presumably—because there were "too many kids around" is something which decent people find it hard to understand.

EPLEY

In a sense, all crime may be unnatural, but this particular case goes much farther in that direction than the usual. It was not the product of a sudden flare of anger, which may be natural. Here was deliberate brutality, in which, if we are to believe reports, the mother of the victim was a participant.

An outraged public can only hope and insist that full justice is done to those responsible. But even that will not allay our deep disturbance over the fact that it could happen.

Difficult

THIS case presented some unusual problems to the police of Southern Oregon and Northern California. By and large, they did an excellent job on a case that was not easily broken. They had excellent public cooperation, and it was a newspaper picture of the child and the aid of a person who recognized it that finally brought success.

Klamath sheriff's officers and state police participated actively in the investigation. Their pursuit of clues was impelled by the erroneous report that the man and child arrived in Weed on a bus from Klamath Falls. In fact, they arrived in a bus from Grants Pass and Medford. The clues that were followed here were promising ones, and deserved following until the case was broken.

Diamond Lake Road

NOT all is bright in the prospects for progress on important road and highway construction in the Klamath area. Technical issues, lack of funds, and delays because of "unacceptable bids," are unfavorable factors in the immediate outlook for a number of the projects. For example:

Serious concern is felt over the Diamond Lake highway reconstruction program. This job was definitely scheduled by the government when it sold 50,000,000 feet of Diamond lake area timber to the Palmerton-Spangler interests of Klamath Falls. The road must be put in shape to carry the logging trucks that will bring that timber to the railroads. Now, there is some talk in government circles that the job can't go ahead unless congress appropriates more funds.

As we recall, there was no question of that kind when the announcement was first made. A federal official told us personally that the work was assured. The government is pledged to do the job, and in view of its importance to an industry that affords substantial employment, the work should proceed immediately.

In later columns, we will discuss other highway problems of the area. The most pressing, at the moment, is Diamond lake.

News Behind The News

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 26 — The Will Clayton crowd in the state department got scared fast away from its original European aid-trade track, when Republican Foreign Leader Vandenberg and Mr. Hoover stood up and said oh-no, let us look at this thing from a non-partisan angle, through a republican controlled congressional committee investigation. Finally, this week, Mr. Truman got around to appointing a supposedly non-partisan, competitive investigating committee himself.

Now statesmen customarily say only 25 per cent of what they think. They generally conceal their actual plans behind headline smokescreens, which they employ publicity agents to send up, forming signs like Indians on the hilltop, although these may bear only a faint notion of what truly is afoot. Hence it is difficult to tell what actually happened from viewing the smoke, but certain hot fires beneath are revealing, namely, to-wit:

The old Ben Cohen newdealers wanted to get away with a multi-billion aid program for Europe. They talked of $5 billion for the next three or four years in addition to the $17 billion we have already poured in. The fact that State Secretary Marshall said at Harvard we had no open-ended cornucopia to enable us to play Lady Bountiful endlessly for Europe, makes no difference to them.

They have been boring within to let Clayton ascertain how much self-aid could be provided in dispirited and relief-minded Europe, then we were to provide the bulk of the rest. Indeed they were trying to press President Truman into calling a special session of congress the beginning of September to handle the foreign aid program.

• • • •

Clayton Newdealish

NOW Mr. Clayton is much of a newdealer himself. While he is the world's largest cotton broker, and therefore super-conscious of British markets, he is unlike the newdealers mainly in insisting on adding things up. He is the American leader on the UNO economic council and heads the American delegation to the forthcoming trade organization meeting. He is not at all republican on such subjects as the tariff. He was supposed to come back and tell us how much the project will cost congress (the republicans) then would be out of town. The administration could work out an aid-trade program all to itself.

In all this personal political edge-stealing, General Marshall has situated himself in a somewhat detached category. His thinking has been spurred largely by his newly created foreign policy planning commission, organized within the state department. Reporters call this commission "a room, a table and five chairs" because that is all they see of it. But Marshall is working closely with his GHQ group of economic and supposedly objective thinkers (they have not yet been assigned any definite political character). He has apparently screened their offices from political influences.

But, of course, all are more or less directly controlled by the Truman overall influence, which, in turn has shown evidence of being influenced increasingly of late by the CIO-PAC, or the Cohen or newdealish leftist theories of spending and giving away.

On the republican side there will be no denying that a trend toward revival of isolationism is evident. Events have pressured this. Seeing the newdealers coming forward to dispense a bounty which does not exist, and preparing to force a new European issue before the country on a wholly unrealistic, idealistic, cloud-soaring plane, the isolationists are coming forth from the political grave to which they were assigned by the complete cooperation and nonpartisanship of Truman-republican collaboration on foreign affairs. This revival will no doubt continue and grow stronger, the less the administration collaborates.

• • • •

Fight Threatens

INDEED, one reason why Mr. Truman's White House advisers have been inclined to counsel against a special session of congress is that it would start this old fight all over again, and put isolationism back on its feet, because the international bookkeeping and financial situation today is heavily discouraging to advancing newdealism. Official figures show we have put $17 billion, yes $17 billion, into Europe since the end of the war—and what have we? (This includes British loan, UNRRA, army expenditures, Greek-Turk aid, etc.) We have only demands for more. Yet we cannot spare ourselves a $4 billion tax cut from war duties. Instead we are actually, in a way, sending coal to Newcastle.

If the Europe aid-trade prospects are fraught with fertile fields for communism, the Truman-republican politics is fraught with ever more dire ambiguities, requiring careful treading.

The republicans apparently stopped one democratic effort to run away with the program, and all concerned are now right back where they started, sharpening their knives.

Smiling at you from top spot today is Marilyn Maxwell. It says in the caption she is now vocalizing on the Abbot and Costello show. It also says she once said "no" to Hollywood. Just one more reason why we don't like to wait on television.

Before either I forget it or you stop reading, here is a program tonight for the serious listener. It comes on at 6:45 p. m. over station KFLW. Name of the show is "America's Town Meeting" and the topic for discussion is, "How can we halt the spread of Russian power in Europe?" The guests, four in all, are prominent Westerners. They are Senator Wayne L. Morse, of Oregon, Palmer Hoyt, editor and publisher of the Denver Post, Robert W. Kenny, former attorney general of California and Charles A. Graham, Denver attorney.

To those of you who recall the picture of Stacy Harris which occupied the head of this column sometime last week, there is good news this afternoon. While thumbing through a stack of blurbs today, I happened on one describing a program called "This is your FBI." Featured very prominently in the last line of the last paragraph was this note ". . . . Stacy Harris as Special Agent Jim Taylor . . . ." So now you know.

Listened to the "Henry Morgan Show" last night. Since I had the radio tuned to the station he graces with his wit a good hour beforehand, (didn't want to miss it) I also heard the Phil Silvers show. On the strength of an interesting blurb, the show was mentioned last week as a good listening possibility. It sounded pretty good. In a few weeks it should have ironed out the rough spots, and will no doubt afford listeners lots of good entertainment this summer.

As for the Henry Morgan show. You have to hear it to believe it. To say the very least it is different. The humor is anything if not obvious. It has a robust quality which should appeal to "Keystone Cop" fans and a freshness that has an appeal to the rebel in all of us. It is not recommended for those who have to have QUIET.

TWO CONVICTED

Loan Mostly Paid Back

WASHINGTON, June 26 (AP) — Oregon borrowers from the home owners loan corporation have liquidated 92.7 per cent of the $20,146,463 they originally borrowed.

John H. Fahey, commissioner of the federal home loan bank administration, gave the figures today to Rep. Stockman (R-Ore.)

He said that originally the home owners loan corporation had made 9416 loans in the state and of 42.6 per cent of the owner-occupied nonfarm dwellings that were mortgaged, 17.5 per cent were refinanced by the corporation.

Fahey said that of the Oregon borrowers 7663 had paid their accounts in full. He said the corporation took over 941 properties in the state—all of which have been sold for full value of the indebtedness.

Ramadier Asks Confidence

PARIS, June 26 (AP) — Premier Paul Ramadier, plagued by a major strike of nearly 200,000 coal miners and many other stoppages, decided Wednesday to ask the national assembly for a vote of confidence.

The test was scheduled for next Tuesday or Wednesday as the parties have tacitly agreed to a political truce during the opening days of the French - British - Russian conference on the Marshall plan.

Industrial Production Minister Robert Lacoste said the miners' strike was costing the country 85,000 tons of desperately needed coal daily, and if it continues would force one-third of the nation's steel mills to close soon.

Fee Ponders Stock Transaction

PORTLAND, June 26 (AP)—Federal Judge James A. Fee had under advisement today the question of whether he will order Guaranty Trust Co., New York, to transfer 236,610 shares of Portland General Electric capital stock back to the trustees of Portland Electric Power company.

Fee said in court yesterday that the original transfer of the stock to a nominee of Guaranty Trust was not authorized. The judge gave the parties five days to file briefs.

Yesterday's hearing was to have Guaranty Trust show cause why it should not return the stock.

Stock Quarantine Program Nearing

ONTARIO, Ore., June 26 (AP)—A livestock quarantine program for the Pacific Northwest was a step nearer today following a meeting of Idaho, Oregon and Washington agriculture officials here.

A spokesman said there was only preliminary discussion here, but that other meetings are expected to follow.

The World Today

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Standardization of arms among the countries of the Western hemisphere as a measure of mutual security is being made a matter of vital urgency by the heads of America's fighting services.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, army chief of staff, emphasized the need of speed yesterday in testifying before the foreign affairs committee of the house of representatives which is holding hearings on President Truman's proposal to effect such standardization. Eisenhower declared that danger would threaten both North and South America, and he was emphatic in saying that now is the time to organize for defense.

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal and Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of naval operations, also supported legislation to authorize the U. S. A. to aid in standardization. They said if legislation was enacted the navy proposes to trade new warships to Latin-American countries for obsolete vessels.

Training Necessary

One of the most telling points at the hearing was made by both Eisenhower and Nimitz—that if the United States doesn't furnish arms and training to the rest of the Western hemisphere, some other countries will. Secretary of State Marshall and Secretary of War Patterson previously had said the same thing.

It was left to Eisenhower to make the disquieting disclosure that other countries already are trying to sell arms to Latin America. He declined to amplify.

Of course the point of wholesale standardization is that the United States would be the arsenal for the entire Western hemisphere in event of an attack directed against both continents. No other nation is equipped industrially to cope with such an emergency. Any nation which wasn't a party to the standardization program would be unable to defend itself, and therefore would be a weak link in the chain.

Eisenhower said that complete cooperation between the United States and Canada is imperative. This is true because in the event of another war one of the first moves of the enemy would be an air attack on the industrial centers near the Great lakes.

Learned Lessons

Military experts learned invaluable lessons regarding standardization during both world wars. There were times when lack of coordination between allies like England and France was damaging. The same was true among some of the Germanic allies, but in both conflicts Germany had a considerable degree of standardization among its followers.

Hitler achieved this through the simple expedient of forcing small countries to accept outmoded German armament in barter trade for the foodstuff which the fatherland needed. Once a country was equipped with German arms, it had to secure ammunition and replacements from the fuehrer's arsenals.

Of course it takes more than standardization to turn the trick. You must have resources, and that's what America still has.

Quarrel Ends In Knifing, Arrest

PORTLAND, June 26 (AP) — A long-standing dispute between two Portland families culminated Wednesday in the knifing of William R. Wade, 30, and the arrest of another man.

Clayton D. Unverrich, 24, was taken into custody and jailed under $3000 bond, but no formal charges have been filed. Wade, stabbed in the cheek and chest, was reported in a critical condition.

Detective C. H. Robertson said a fight broke out last night when Wade and his uncle went to the home of Wade's estranged wife, Audrey, and found three members of the Unverrich family there.

Detectives said a complicated tangle of disputes had been under way for two years between the people involved.

Builders Of Bar Face Charges

PORTLAND, June 26 (AP)—Three Portlanders accused of building a night club and bar without authorization were charged today with violating the veterans' housing program in a suit filed in federal court.

The government charged that Russel Fisher, Sam Miller and George Wirth were denied permission to build a night club. Then they said they would build a woodworking plant, the complaint continued, but the structure turned out to be a night club after all.

Wattenburg Death Told

Robert Edmund Wattenburg, 68, well known Klamath Falls contractor and builder, died at Klamath Valley hospital 12:02 p.m. today following an illness of the past six months. Ward's Klamath Funeral home will announce final rites for the prominent resident who had made his home in this city since 1906.

Mr. Wattenburg was born in Eugene, Ore., July 21, 1878, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Wattenburg. His father crossed the plains by ox team with his parents in 1862, and the family settled in Eastern Oregon. The elder Mr. Wattenburg died in 1916, his wife only last year.

After attending public schools in Pendleton and Fossil, Robert E. Wattenburg learned the contracting and carpenter trade under his father's tutelage. At an early age he opened his own contracting business in Pendleton. In 1906 he moved to Klamath Falls and followed this business, erecting his own shop at 801 Spring in 1918. This business was known as Klamath Pine Products and specialized in planing mill and cabinet shop work. Among the important buildings Mr. Wattenburg has constructed in Klamath Falls are the IOOF building in 1910, the First Presbyterian church, Klamath Valley hospital in 1919, and many other business and residential structures.

Mr. Wattenburg and Nellie Davidson, who survives her husband, were married at LaGrande, Ore., June 5, 1905. During their long residence in this city, both have been active in civic and fraternal affairs. Mr. Wattenburg was a member of Klamath lodge No. 77, A. F. and A. M., Klamath chapter Royal Arch Masons of which he was past high priest, and member of Calvary commandery, Knights Templar, past worthy patron of Aloha chapter, OES, and president of the Masonic Building association and a member of IOOF. He leaves a host of friends to mourn his passing and high tribute was paid to his memory this afternoon when word of his passing was learned.

Dial Telephone Service To Start In Bly On July 2

A new dial telephone office at Bly now is being equipped to replace the present magneto system, and the "cut-over" to dial service is tentatively scheduled for July 2, according to C. E. Seavey, manager for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company.

The new equipment is housed in a one-story brick and frame office building constructed late last year by Contractor Leo N. Huls, Mr. Seavey said. Cost of land, building and equipment is estimated at close to $10,000.

Telephone crews now are installing dial telephones on customer premises, according to Mr. Seavey, and will complete this phase of the work before the cut-over date.

Complete instructions for using the new dial system are being mailed to all Bly telephone customers, who will be able to dial local calls. Long distance and assistance calls will be made by dialing "O" for operator. These calls will be answered, and the desired information given, by operators in Klamath Falls.

A supplemental telephone directory in mimeographed form will be issued to Bly customers. It will be used only until the Klamath Falls directory, which will contain the new Bly numbers, is delivered about July 15.

CHANGING CLUBS

CHICAGO, June 26 (AP)—John Pizza, chief of police in suburban Calumet park, is going to retire after 17 years on the force and open a night club.

"I'm tired of seeing people in trouble and unhappy," said the 40 year old chief. "I want to watch some happy, carefree people for a while."

Canal Load Under Normal

The main government canal is now carrying about 800 second feet of water, which is 200 feet under the normal use of the canal at this season of the year, according to E. L. Stephens, reclamation engineer and operations chief.

Recent rains that have given the crops natural moisture are largely responsible for the reduced use of water at this time, Stephens said.

He added that a considerable portion of the valley's crop land which has been in potatoes in recent years is now in other crops, especially barley, and grain field irrigation is not extensive at this period.

Stephens said that as hot weather advances, increased use of irrigation water will require upping the carrying volume of the big canal through town.
