Czechs Still Remember Failure Of American Army

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK, July 16 (AP)—There weren't any Russian spheres in Pilsen that day we pulled in just before the Czechs broke out.
There weren't any Russians there either—or beer either. Bombs had leveled the famous brewery as well as the Skoda works.
We were going through Czechoslovakia one way, and the Russians were sweeping the Germans toward the other side like a pile of snow.
The capital at Prague 55 miles away, the Czech patriots decided they had earned a crack at the Germans after seven years, so they began attacking the armored columns they muscled through the streets.
"The Americans will get here in a few hours to help us," said the leaders, so all Prague pitched in against the attack.
They tore up the streets with bare hands and made barriers with bones. They shot at the German army tanks with shotguns, and threw bottles of gasoline.

It was one fight the Nazi SS column wasn't looking for. The panicky Germans wanted only to get through the city to give up to the Americans and "old capture by the Russians."
But they had to fight. They smashed one group of Czech patriots in the Prague city hall with tank fire that burned the centuries-old building to the ground. And they tied screaming women and children on their tanks so the Czech civilians would hold their sniping fire.
Helpless against the stronger German firepower, the Czech patriots sent delegation after delegation to Pilsen to urge the American third army to hurry into Prague and save them. They met a surprising answer:
"We cannot move beyond Pilsen." Under a high level allied agreement American forces were under unalterable orders to halt there and wait for the Russians to link up with them. This was to avoid any

Poe Valley Road Paved

Klamath county road department has completed construction of 10 miles of paving on the South Poe valley road, three miles on the North Poe valley road, and half a mile at Dairy to connect with a railroad siding.
County Judge U. E. Reeder said that money for the work, totaling around $50,000, was available from last year's budget, and the work was rushed to get it under the 1946-47 fiscal year program.
The South road connects the Klamath Falls-Lakeview highway (Oregon 66) with the new federal secondary highway which crosses from Malin to Bonanza. It leaves No. 66 at Olene.
