

Morse Pushes Veteran Bills

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP)—Republican Senator Morse (Ore.) applied fresh pressure on party leaders today for passage of two more veterans aid bills.

Four of them—including the terminal leave bond cashing measure which went to President Truman—won senate approval in a long Saturday session.

But Morse's chances for quick action on his proposals appeared dim as the result of a promise by GOP chiefs giving top priority today to legislation seeking an investigation into the justice department's handling of vote fraud charges in the 1946 Kansas City democratic primary.

Morse said he intended "to do whatever I can" to bring his two bills to a vote today. They would:

1. Increase salary ceilings covering on-the-job veterans training from the present $175 a month for single veterans to $200, and from $200 to $250 for those who are married.

2. Authorize a 15 per cent hike in grants to disabled veterans under a rehabilitation program.

Neither bill has been acted upon by the house, which makes it doubtful that congress could complete consideration by Saturday, the date scheduled for adjournment.

Both measures were put aside temporarily Saturday after the senate passed the four other bills and sent a fifth back to the banking committee for further study.

The terminal pay bond measure won approval by a vote of 85 to 0.

It authorizes, but does not require, the cashing after September 1 of an estimated $1,800,000,000 in special five-year bonds held by an estimated 9,000,000 veterans.

Also sent to the White House Saturday was a measure to increase by 20 per cent pensions to veterans (and their dependents) of the Civil and Spanish American wars.

Senate passage shunted to the house, meanwhile, bills providing for:

(A) A 15 per cent cost of living increase in subsistence grants to veterans going to school under the GI bill of rights. Single veterans payments would be boosted from the current $65 to $75 a month; married veterans without children would get $105 instead of $90 and those who have children would receive $120, an increase of $30.

(B) Renewal and liberalization of the program under which the government provides new automobiles for amputee veterans. The old program, which expired June 30, covered only those who lost a leg. The new one would cover those who have lost the use of one or more legs and arms, and those who were blinded.
