

Venue Shift Rejected In Nagel Case

A motion for change of venue was denied William Henry Nagel, 40-year-old Portland preacher, this morning in circuit court and he is to be tried in Klamath county next September on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor girl.

Circuit Judge Orval J. Millard of Grants Pass, on the bench for this case, listened to arguments in favor of taking the trial to another county presented by Attorney George Mowry, and arguments against the switch presented by District Attorney Clarence A. Humble, before making his decision.

He instructed local court officers to draw a special venire of 31 prospective jurors to hear the case, and stipulated that no juror on the panel would be on the trial jury. Nagel has pleaded not guilty to the charge, which involves a 16-year-old girl.

Nagel allegedly exposed himself to the child on Sunday afternoon, May 31, and was taken into custody by Circuit Judge David R. Vandenberg. Judge Vandenberg signed the complaint against Nagel, appeared before the grand jury which indicted the Portlander, received the indictment, set Nagel's bond of $2500 and excused himself from the case.

Mowry, Nagel's attorney, asked the change of venue on grounds that the preacher wouldn't get a fair and impartial trial in Klamath county because of Judge Vandenberg's part in the case, and said that if the motion was denied he would contest the jurisdiction of the local court to try the case.

Judge Millard, however, decided against moving the trial to another district and said that he would have the trial here in September, the date to be set later.

Crop Insurance Limitation Eyed

PORTLAND, July 26 (AP)—Only one Oregon county could qualify for crop insurance under a proposed house bill, Muri E. Cummings, state director of the federal crop insurance corporation, said today.

He said the senate's version of the bill would enable about 12 counties to participate. At present 20 have crop insurance.

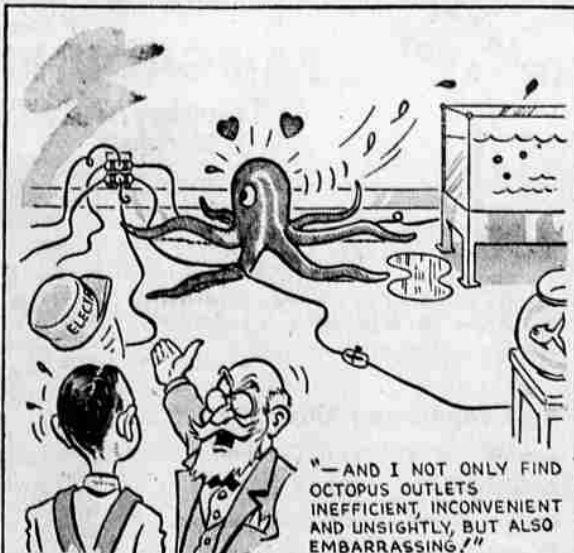

The differences between the bills were to be ironed out in joint committee.

He did not indicate which might be the one county eligible under the house proposal.

Emergency Flight

Mrs. Julian L. Phillippe of Visalia, Calif., was vacationing at Lake o' the Woods when she received a telegram Wednesday at 9:30 a. m. saying her husband had been injured in an accident. She was at his bedside only a few hours later.

Jack Dutcher, resort owner, phoned Penny Payne at Lakeland Flying service when Mrs. Phillippe received the message. Payne took an Ercoupe and landed on the strip at Lake o' the Woods where he picked her up and flew her to Visalia. The trip took four hours and 30 minutes.

Six more student pilots taking flight instructor with Lakeland Flying service made solo flights recently. Dr. Vincent Held soloed in an Ercoupe. Jack Lambert was given a water rating in the Seabee. Chester B. Liechty, brand inspector, soloed in an Ercoupe. Liechty has been using planes for work of tracing missing cattle for some time, but always had a pilot fly him. Now he will be able to take himself up on his air search missions.

Two more Ercoupe soloists are Clarence Enloe, punice tile plant operator in Tulelake, and Don Brown, local rancher. Bill Allen of Tulelake soloed in a Taylorcraft.

Abe Neslin's odd-looking Kenner Security with its folding wings hangared at Klamath airport, is drawing a lot of attention. Neslin took flight instruction with OAS and then purchased the plane, the only one of its kind at the local base. Dick Dressler flew it over from Ashland for Neslin.
