Today's Roundup

THE location of the forthcoming hearings on the Klamath Indian reservation liquidation bill has become a matter of considerable concern.

EPLEY

Many Indians feel that inasmuch as this matter is primarily one of concern to the Indians themselves, the hearing should be held at the place where the greatest number of tribesmen can sit in.

On the other hand, the first arrangements which were made for the hearing were for use of room at the courthouse in Klamath Falls.

We do not see how the location of the hearings can influence the outcome of the investigations.

Our personal feeling is that the Indians who want the hearing on the reservation have something on their side, and we say that with some reluctance.

Gene Krupa Signs For Fans

This group of teen-aged autograph seekers was on hand Monday when Gene Krupa, "America's Ace Drummer Man," signed his famous name on records for swing fans.

a political haven. These people had spread their own impression that a critical emergency on the issue requires immediate action.

There are perhaps 1,000,000 Europeans who do not wish to return to their homes for political or social reasons (they fear to go under the wing of communism).

A majority was in agriculture before the war, but the group also includes variously skilled workers.

Congress realized the problem could not be solved simply by opening American immigration gates to let the mass flow in although some evidence indicated many had relatives here who might support them.

If this were true, however, republican Representative Keefe of Wisconsin pointed out in a speech which was not noticed that admirals had testified shipping was unavailable to bring any small portion to these shores.

There is a further fear that in event of a recession, the admission of DP's might complicate the employment problem.

But perhaps a faster, part-answer to the problem will be found at the forthcoming meeting of foreign ministers of the Americas.

Certainly a permanent solution (not a temporary, emergency answer) must be sought, and it must be found in the answer to the three questions rather than the bitter, misleading propaganda which is now being circulated, obscuring the actual facts.

The World Today

By DEWITT MACKENZIE AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The decision by Socialist Prime Minister Attlee and his cabinet to defer nationalization of Britain's great steel industry, possibly for the duration of the country's economic crisis, is a concession to orthodox means of the recovery, which is to say "capitalistic."

The extent of that concession can be seen from the fact that nationalization of steel was one of the major items in the platform on which socialism came to power in the general election two years ago.

The picture of steel nationalization gives us a good view of the differences which have divided the socialist party into left and right wings. The socialist election platform called for a moderate experiment in socialization.

What the socialists wanted at least moderate socialists was merely nationalization of basic steel production. However, they promptly ran up against the proposition that nationalization in numerous instances involved not only the making of steel but the finished product manufactured from the steel.

The Don Devine marine motor building, 123 N. Spring, was burglarized early yesterday by someone who used a toy wagon to haul away the loot.

Value of the stolen articles was placed at $100.

Members of the local Keep Oregon Green committee were treated to a steak dinner at the Willard hotel last night by Charlie Ogle, chief of the state organization, who was in town checking up on the work of the local group.

After the dinner Ogle showed color movies of scenic Oregon points and discussed ways of advertising the KOG program.

Mention was also made of the work which is slowly progressing on the big whitewashed "Keep Oregon Green" rock sign on Hebeek mountain, and Ogle announced that several publications plan to feature the big sign in pictures and articles when it is finished.
