Employment Figure Up In Klamath

There was a substantial increase in employment in the Klamath area during the month of July, according to figures released by the Klamath office of the Oregon state employment service. Employment increased in the logging and construction fields, probably due to dry weather. Agricultural work remained steady throughout the area as did retail trade activity. Highway jobs are moving along rapidly with most of the labor being furnished through the employment office. Retail trade activity is up and remaining steady.

According to Jack Almeter, employment head, there are not as many jobs this year as compared to last July, but the over-all picture is improved over June. Unemployment for July is lower than Junes estimate with 790 people minus jobs.

The number of migrant workers coming into the area was on the ascension in July with 295 counted by the employment agency. Compared to June's total of 182, this was a 60 per cent increase for July.

There were 148 unfilled positions listed with the employment service as of July 31. Of the figure, 63 were in logging and lumbering industries, 47 in trade and service, 4 in construction work and 34 in miscellaneous jobs. Almeter reports that there is still a demand for highly skilled sawmill and logging men and certain qaulified heavy equipment operators are needed by the bureau of reclamation. There is still a demand for skilled stenographers.

During the first part of July the housing situation had loosened up to some extent but Almeter stated that housing has again become scarce. The construction of new houses has slacked off and there are several houses for sale that are standing vacant, probably because of high sale price.

Gregory Fur Shop In New Building

The Gregory Fur shop opened for business Monday morning at the new location on 815 East Main. The $5000 building is of brick and tile. Work was started on it about two months ago. The building contains a reception room decorated in peach, a cold storage vault and a large work room.

Owners of the shop are Mr. and Mrs. Laco Gregory. They have been in the fur business in Klamath Falls for the past 11 years. Until they moved to East Main they operated a shop on S. 6th.
