Human Rights Bill Drafted

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 19 (AP) — The world's first international bill of human rights—drafted over Soviet opposition by the United Nations commission on human rights—was forwarded to the UN Thursday with the recommendation that all the member governments adopt the measure.

The bill, drawn up at the close of a two-weeks conference of the 18-member commission under the chairmanship of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, consisted of:

1. A declaration of human rights, which the commission proposed for adoption by the UN as a body and which would have only a moral binding force.
2. A covenant of human rights—proposed for adoption by UN members individually with legal binding force on each nation which ratifies it.
3. An international court of human rights and a five-nation committee to examine alleged violations for which UN adoption also was sought.

Marshall Plan U. S. Bid To Keep Peace In The World

confidence in a better way of life for the future," he declared, "this cost is small indeed."

Mr. Truman said he was recommending the program to congress "in full confidence of its wisdom and necessity... a major step in our nation's quest for a just and lasting peace."

As a joint undertaking of the United States and a group of European countries, he said, the program "is proof that free men can effectively join together to defend their free institutions against totalitarian pressures, and to promote better standards of life for all their peoples."

Many gifts

As outlined in the documents sent to congress, "much" of the aid would be in the form of gifts, some would be in loans.

There was no breakdown on how the $17,000,000,000 would be split among the various countries. There was no estimate, either, of how much the United States might get back.

Deals are supposed to be worked out for getting from the receiving countries supplies of scarce, strategic materials to store up in the United States. But for these, this country would pay cash.

Both in quantity and in cost to the United States the European nations would get less than they requested when they met in Paris last fall and drew up a list of needs. Already prices are up on the things they asked for.

Republicans in congress, also concerned about higher prices, have been talking of slashing the Marshall plan total with the idea that prices at home would come down if less money were spent to buy things for Europe.

Many members wined when Secretary of State Marshall figured last month that it would take $16,000,000 to $20,000,000 to help Europe back to her feet. As the program finally reached congress it was only a little less.

The $17,000,000,000 is a round number.

Price Might Dip

Depending chiefly on whether prices go up or down, government experts estimate the actual cost to this country might dip as low as $15,111,000,000 or climb as high as $17,755,000,000, not including $202,000,000 for Western Germany which the administration is asking separately for 15 months.

Help from the international bank, private financing, other western hemisphere nations and additional sources might up the total of outside assistance to between $20,024,000,000 and $22,685,000,000.

The most the 16 nations on the receiving end are getting is $22,440,000,000 for an even four years.

These nations, which would guarantee to help themselves and each other in order to get a hand from Uncle Sam, are: Austria, Italy, Belgium, Britain, Denmark, Eire, France, Greece, Iceland, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland and Turkey.

They took their cue from Marshall, who in a speech at Harvard university last June outlined his plan for throwing American dollars behind Europe's efforts to help herself.

Asserting that "aggressive" activities by communists and red-inspired groups have been aimed directly at barring recovery, in Europe, Mr. Truman added:

"The past few years can determine whether the free countries of Europe will be able to preserve their heritage of freedom.

"If Europe fails to recover, the peoples of these countries might be driven to the philosophy of despair—the philosophy which contends that their basic wants can be met only by the surrender of their basic rights to totalitarian control.

"Such a turn of events would constitute a shattering blow to peace and stability in the world. It might well compel us to modify our own economic system and to forego, for the sake of our own security, the enjoyment of many of our freedoms and privileges."

Rotarians To Give Children's Party

The Rotary club's children's Christmas party will be held today at 7 p. m. in the Salvation Army citadel, 400 Klamath avenue.

The program will include carol singing by the audience, special singing by a group of high school chorists under the direction of Andrew Loney, a playlet, "The Sad Dwarf," presented by Salvation Army young people, and moving pictures shown by Gene Baile.

There will be treats of fruit, nuts and candy for the children.

Fifteen hundred cubic miles of water fall upon the earth every year.

Camp Fire News

What do Camp Fire Girls do? A full answer to that question would make the writer of this the author of a complete volume. But a quick look at what one group of Camp Fire Girls did for one month may prove to be an interesting start on that answer.

This particular group of girls is located in one of the communities outside of Klamath Falls in Klamath county. It is a new group, organized just this fall and meets at the home of the guardian who attended a leaders' training course given in Klamath Falls this fall.

The first meeting of this group was exciting indeed, for there was the important business of electing officers. And elected they were, in due time, with proper motions, seconds and voting. Following this, the girls asked a great many questions about Camp Fire and discussed with much vigor what they wanted to do for the next meeting.

There was a natural difference in opinion at this point, but a hike was finally settled upon. Singing and a few games preceded the close of the first meeting.

The following week, 13 new and very enthusiastic Camp Fire Girls went on the previous, planned hike, with a flipped penny at each corner deciding the course. Each girl had packed her own lunch which was soon a thing of the past. While resting before starting home, each hiker tried to outdo her companions in listing the unusual things she had noticed on the way.

The third meeting found the group again at the home of their guardian. By this time, each girl had secured a copy of "The Book of the Camp Fire Girl," which is the handbook and much of the time was spent in exploring the book and indexing it so that anything in it might be quickly found. While looking at their handbooks, the girls soon discovered that they had already earned one of the requirements for their first Camp Fire rank, that of trail seeker, by taking the hike the previous week. They also learned that they could name their group with an Indian name. After much excited chatter about what name they wanted, a vote was taken and the name O-da-ko, meaning "friendship," was chosen. The girls also talked about what Indian name they would like for themselves, but decided they would wait and each choose their own name and tell the others at the next meeting.

After enjoying refreshments, the guardian handed out parts for a skit, about a family that didn't eat the right kind of breakfasts and told them about National Better Breakfast Week. The girls had such fun reading the parts of the skit that they decided they wanted to learn it and put it on for their room at school.

The last of the four meetings we will look in on was held the next week. At this meeting the girls worked on the skit, learned several new songs and ended up in the guardians' back yard toasting marshmallows over the fire.

That is the account of four actual meetings of an actual Camp Fire group in this community. What did the girls in this group gain from their first month of Camp Fire? Many things, I think. They began to learn the intricacies of parliamentary procedure in electing their officers and discovered how democracy really works in choosing their group name. A beginning of a curiosity about nature was awakened on the hike, as well as the love for outdoor activities. The girls learned some facts about nutrition while working on the "Better Breakfast" skit, and were given a chance to express themselves individually with the choosing of their own name. While gaining these values, the girls were learning to work and play together in a group. And most important of all in the eyes of the girls themselves—they had fun!

Former Prisoner Of Japs Dies

Mrs. Ora Betty Webber Looney, a former civilian prisoner of war of the Japanese, died Thursday afternoon at Klamath Valley hospital a few minutes after she was taken out of a hotel room.

Deputy Coroner Marvin Albee said that probably an autopsy would be performed to establish the cause of death. The woman is reported to have tried to take her own life and several weeks ago left a suicide note which is in the hands of the police.

Albee said that he had located no relatives of Mrs. Looney in Klamath Falls, but that he had
