Circus Saints And Sinners Club Punctures Speakers

By HALE BOYLE
 NEW YORK, Jan. 5 (AP)—One of the more grisly ways to put yourself to sleep in America is to count the sodden clichés made by long-winded after-dinner speakers. There is an organization here, however, which is doing something to give audiences their revenge. It is the Circus Saints and Sinners society. This unique club reverses the usual procedure by making the guest of honor the "fall guy" of its monthly meetings. And it has become so popular that celebrities angle for a chance to endure the two-hour program of pranks and ridicule that wins them a lifetime membership. The society began this way: In 1931 F. Darius Benham, a newspaperman, complained to friends in Sardi's about the boredom of banquets at which the honored guest was always feted and inflated. "A club where we kidded him would be more fun," he said. "We could deflate a guy and make him like it. The bigger a guy he is the better he'd like it."

Thin Skinned
 His friends thought most celebrities too thin-skinned to go for the treatment, but agreed to a club if he could find a "fall guy." Leaving the restaurant, Benham bumped into Count Felix von Luckner, famous lecturer and daring German sea raider of the First World War. Von Luckner readily agreed to be first guinea pig. The society was organized with 17 circus fans as members pledged to raise funds to befriend impoverished old circus troupers. "For four years we had tough going, and then the thing caught on," Benham said. Now the club is restricted to 650 members—prominent businessmen, artists, actors, writers and others—and has a long waiting list. Among those initiated have been nine cabinet members, 15 congressmen and senators, several governors, and sports figures such as Babe Ruth and Jack Dempsey. The club's president, former Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, sets the tempo of the meeting by setting off firecrackers and banging away with a blank pistol instead of a gavel. After undergoing a long ribbing in a series of scathing stage skits that parody his career, the speaker is given a chance to reply but is warned: Know Better

"You ought to know better now than to try to give this crowd your usual malarkey, but if you don't—". The warning is enough to restrain any sleep-inducing oratorical flights. One of the most laughable skits was presented at the initiation of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower. The spectral figure of Gen. U. S. Grant appeared and announced he had come to give Eisenhower "just one word of advice." The word was: "Don't!" Hoffman said the society had raised "thousands of dollars and helped hundreds of old circus troupers who have no one else to turn

Airmen Rescued In Alaska B29 Crash

Only the tail section and pieces of burned wreckage (top) remained after an army B29 crashed 85 miles north of Nome while on a training flight, but it was home to six of eight fliers aboard for a week until two daring Alaska bush pilots in small planes made their rescue. Below one of the fliers is being helped to one of the rescue planes. These pictures were made by Rud Richter, Nome photographer who accompanied the rescue planes, in 30 to 40 degree below zero weather. The pictures were then flown to Seattle.

Cancer Specialist Trip Still Mystery

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 5 (AP)—A cancer specialist's mysterious trip to Moscow remained mysterious today. An assistant said Dr. Ellis Berven had taken along a set of special instruments "because he thought they might not be available in Russia." The assistant, Dr. Sven Hultberg, related: "He told us he had been telegraphically summoned by four Russian colleagues for an urgent consultation and had to leave immediately. He left a lot of work behind him." Dr. Berven left Saturday, saying he did not know his patient's name.

Among the Bantus of South Africa, the women by custom do the farming and a Bantu male who farmed his own land would be regarded as mad by his neighbors.

Bridge Builders Race Stork In Marion County Washout

SALEM, Jan. 5 (AP)—Marion county bridge construction crews raced the stork today in building a new bridge across the Little North Fork of the Santiam river, 27 miles southeast of Salem. Three expectant mothers are among the scores of loggers and ranchers who were marooned last Tuesday when the old wooden bridge on the Ekhorn road collapsed under the weight of a logging truck. County engineering officials said they hope to have the new bridge in place by Tuesday night. It is a Bailey bridge, a steel prefabricated structure which gained fame in World War II. The bridge was loaned to the county by the state highway commission, which keeps it on hand for such emergencies. It was hauled in trucks to the mountainous site. The crews worked all day Sunday. Supplies were carried to some families in a rubber boat. The stranded families' only other route to civilization is by way of a dirt road which is almost impassable this time of year. No pregnant woman could use it. The three women are expecting their babies in a few days.

Rifle Fired In Play Kills

SEATTLE, Jan. 5 (AP)—A 13-year-old Isaquah boy was wounded fatally Saturday by a shot from a rifle with which he and a younger brother were playing near their home. The victim was Wayne Morris, son of Mr. and Mrs. David R. Morris, both of whom were reported by a neighbor to have been at their jobs in Seattle at the time of the tragedy. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Woods, who live an eighth of a mile away, said the wounded boy stumbled into their home at 10 p. m., clutching his chest, and cried: "Dick shot me! Dick is his 7-year-old brother." The Woods rushed the boy to Isaquah but were unable to find a doctor. He died in an ambulance en route to Seattle.

Basin Students Make Honor Roll

Four Klamath basin residents, three men and a girl, students of Southern Oregon college, made the honor roll during the fall term, one attaining a straight "4" grade point average. Walter Foster of Keno was one of four students that made the charmed circle. Two others, Kenneth Bradshaw of Bonanza, Richard Hicks and Carl Vanderwall of Klamath Falls made the honor list with a grade point average of 3.5 or better while carrying a regular minimum study load of at least 12 hours. Twenty-eight students made this list, representing five per cent of the student body.

He Was There, Under The House

PORTLAND, Jan. 5 (AP)—Police were very skeptical when called to the home of Genevieve Smith and told there was a man under her house. But they made a routine check—and found she was right, arresting a vagrant who had curled up under the flooring for an early morning snooze.
