

Readjustment Of American Economy Seen By Mid-Year

By HARRY T. MONTGOMERY
Associated Press General Business Editor
NEW YORK, Jan. 9 (AP)—The American economy set many peacetime records as it boomed through 1947, but as the nation goes into January, 1948, there are increasing signs of possible trouble ahead.

For 1948 business leaders and economists predicted at least a leveling off, and some see the recession which, though widely heralded, failed to develop in '47.

Mid-year now is the date most generally mentioned for the necessary readjustment. If it comes, its severity will depend on what happens between now and then, and in particular on whether the current inflation gets out of hand.

This inflation was, in fact, among the problems of the greatest concern to American leaders, from President Truman down, as the year closed. Disagreement over methods of combatting it slowed concerted action, yet meanwhile the problem was growing more acute as the inflation spiral lengthened.

Prices of many things, including such essentials as food and clothing, are expected to rise further in 1948. On the other hand, further wage increases may be granted to industrial workers now getting roughly double what they did before the war.

The new year is expected to bring back in force for the first time since the war the real price competition which is a traditional characteristic of our capitalistic economy. When it comes, perhaps for most business about midyear, it should force prices down.

The danger is that if they get too high beforehand, they will fall too fast and too much. Business failures will mount in any event; with a sudden plunge of prices they will be epidemic, and the unwanted depression will be under way.

Statistics for 1947 were dramatic, if not altogether comforting for the average citizen, who was being increasingly pinched by rising prices, high taxes and some continued shortages.

The economists studied with interest the dollar value of the nation's output, hitting at the end of the year a rate of more than $230,000,000,000, compared with an average of $207,700,000,000 for 1946. Some predicted it would hit $250,000,000,000 in 1948, which would be double the $125,000,000,000 figure for 1941 and approaching three times the $90,400,000,000 rate of the last real prewar year, 1939.

The average citizen, however, was more interested in different figures in 1947: It took well over $1 to buy a dozen eggs, a pound of butter or a pound of beefsteak over wide sections of the country.

In general most goods became just twice as expensive as before the war; in other terms, the dollar was worth about half what it was in 1939.

Business leaders studying charts of their own enterprises are aware that break-even points are getting too high, that is, despite today's high business income, costs are great, too, and margins of safety are narrow. There is, not too much room for the declines which must come from time to time.

The nation's traditional barometer of the business future, the stock market, throughout 1947 reflected the gloomier aspects of the economy, rather than the boom.

While nearly all charts of business activity showed a fairly steady upward curve, Wall Street virtually stood still. The Associated Press average of 60 leading stocks closed 1946 at 66.4 and then plodded through 1947 without going more than a few points either way from this figure. Through most of December it was a few points below the year's starting level.

The bond market was in solid depression. The Associated Press average of railroad bonds dropped about seven points during the year, industrials about three, utilities about five, governments about eight, and low-yield corporations about eight.

The average American was leaving the charts for the experts. He knew he fared fairly well in 1947, despite high prices. Employment was at an all-time peak, passing the one-time "ideal" goal of 60,000,000 jobs in midyear, and unemployment was at a postwar low of 1,600,000. Compared to most of his brothers abroad, he lived in princely fashion.

Optimism, supposed to be characteristically American, is his keynote for 1948, and as the new year arrives the experts, despite their warnings, cannot prove that his view should be different.

Mrs. Mabel Holt, supervisor of the adoptive placement division of the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society, will speak before members of the Klamath Falls Woman's Library club at the first meeting of the new year slated for Monday, January 12, at the library clubrooms.

Most Stocks Show Losses

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (AP)—A few oils and industrials continued to make headway in today's stock market while many leaders were unable to shake off moderate losses.

Caution was the watchword from the start with dealings among the slowest since November. A few wide jumpers persisted near the close but fractional declines were widespread. Transfers for the two hours were around 350,000 shares.

The federal reserve boost of the discount rate, which had been pretty well anticipated, was taken in stride marketwise although it deterred some potential purchasers who felt that the step was only one of others that might be taken by Washington to combat inflation. Mild reinvestment demand served as a trend prop. Numerous customers held aloof pending more light on taxes, business and foreign complications.

Bonds and commodities were a trifle uneven.

MARKETS and FINANCIAL GRAIN SLUGGISH ON MARKET

CHICAGO, Jan. 10 (AP)—Grains failed to move far in either direction on the board of trade today, although the undertone was firm and most contracts held onto small fractional gains made during early dealings.

Activity was restricted as traders studied the latest agriculture department report on farm stocks on farms as of January 1. The report showed that wheat supplies were relatively large while stocks of feed grains were the smallest since 1937.

The market advanced sufficiently at times to establish several new highs. March oats and March soybeans made records for any contracts of these commodities. New seasonal peaks were scored by May, July and September corn and September and December oats.

The record high for March oats was $1.33 and for March soybeans $4.30.

Wheat closed 1 cent lower to 1 1/2, higher, May $2.98 1/2, corn was 1 1/2, higher, May $2.61 1/2, oats were 1/2, lower to 2 1/2, higher, May $1.24 1/2, and soybeans were 1/2, lower to 1/2, higher, March $4.29.

Fuel Oil Conservation Bulletin

In the interest of the Fuel Oil Conservation program, the government is requesting at this time, we pass on to you the following FACTS:

1. Keep temperature at 70° F. If you burn 2,000 gallons a year, you'll use nearly 300 additional gallons of fuel if the thermostat is set for 75° instead of 70°. The lower temperature is more healthful, too.
2. Maintain lower temperature at night. Fuel oil savings by lowering the thermostat 5° at night can run as high as 9 1/2% in a single season.
3. Insulation and weatherstripping will usually pay for themselves in a hurry. It costs money to heat all outdoors and you'll get no thanks for that.
4. Have your heating system cleaned and checked professionally every year. Just 1/16-inch of soot can run your fuel consumption up as much as 26%.
5. Pull down window shades at night. A well fitting shade keeps in far more heat than you'd expect.
6. Close off sleeping rooms from rest of house at night.
7. When fireplace is not in use, be sure the damper is tightly closed.
8. Be sure your fuel oil is top grade... and delivered clean.

* Bulletin received from Oil Heat Institute of America, of which we are a member.

HEAT CONSERVATION MAKES GOOD "CENTS"

Our meter-printed ticket assures you of correct quantity. Over 28 years in business locally assures you we sell only quality fuels. Let our "Keep-Filled-Check-System" give you maximum convenience in your use of oil heating.
