"Back Home," by Bill Mauldin. This is a veteran's personal chronicle on his adjustment to civilian life. There is irony, exasperation and considerable ridicule, expressed not only in prose, but in lively cartoon; provoking thought and laughter.

"Africa, I Presume?" by Alan Reeve. The author, an able artist and journalist, knows how to present word pictures. They have a way of taking hold. Whether we are following him in quest of diamonds, gold or lions we find the experience gratifying. And we come away with a broader understanding of the continent's problems and the relation between races.

"The La Follette and the Wisconsin Idea," by Edward Dean. La Follette believed that political freedom is effective only in proportion to the way it is used, and that it cannot long survive unless the tendencies toward concentration of power are checked. The book offers a pertinent study of our political and economic life.

its freshness. "The willows were only light blurs, for the moon was frosting their upturned leaves, and the pond was a dusky brimming lustre in the night."

NYC Lottery Plan Squelched

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 29 (AP)—Leaders of the republican-controlled legislature turned a cold shoulder Wednesday toward the New York city council's proposal to conduct a one-year lottery for the benefit of the city's hospitals.

"There's not a chance in the world for it," said the top leader who asked not to be named pending study of the council's resolution.

Other republican leaders echoed this attitude.

FISH FACTS

Dear Friends:
We have just received our first fresh water fish out of Great Slave Lake in North-western territory of Canada. This is a huge lake covering over 10,500 square miles of water surface, being the fifth largest body of water in the North American continent.

The fishing camp is 300 miles south of the Arctic Circle, and the fish are transported from Great Slave Lake by tractor sled 400 miles south from there to the railroad, and distributed from there. The fishermen chop huge holes in the ice and fish with their seines in that manner, pulling them up on the ice and dressing the fish there and leaving them to freeze naturally as the weather there is sub-zero. They are then boxed and shipped out as described above.

Our first shipment consisted of dressed head-on genuine Whitefish, running from 2 to 5 pounds; also head-on Lake Trout which run from 4 to 20 pounds. We also received some of a new variety we never heard of before, called the "Inconnu Fish," which runs from 6 to 12 pounds.

Besides receiving such fish delicacies as these, we are now getting daily shipments of fresh ocean-caught fish.

Fresh ocean crabs, oysters, fillets and many others arrive daily. In fact, we have nearly every kind of fish that swims. Come in and see for yourself.
