Photogs Row Over Model

CHICAGO, Feb. 2 (AP)—Two rival photographers engaged in a $500,000 law suit today over the services of a model with these attributes:

Youthful lines, exceedingly fair, tall, willowy, graceful, blue-eyed, delicate, appealing and of rare beauty."

Miss Betty Van Dree, 21, was described thus by Edward Harlan, 40, in his suit against Steve Burton, photographer and playwright. Harlan's bill gave this account:

Under a partnership agreement both men employed the model. Miss Van Dree was to spend half her time appearing as slave girl in a play, "Midnight Barter" for Burton and the other half posing as a calendar model for Harlan.

Instead, Burton took photographs of her, made them into phosphorescent pictures and began selling them for $10 a copy.

Miss Van Dree, the suit filed in superior court asserted, is "a woman of rare beauty of a quality which is difficult, if not impossible, to replace."

Traction Workers Ask Pay Boost

PORTLAND, Feb. 2 (AP)—A 25-cent hourly pay increase will be asked by Portland Traction company operators and mechanics, Alex Blal, union business manager, said today.

The present scale is $1.40 for operators and $1.55 for mechanics. Gordon Steele, company president, said the increase would cost the company $62,500 a month. Previously he had said the company would ask the city council for a fare increase if earnings were cut materially. Last year fares were increased from three rides for 25 cents to 11 for $1.

Payroll Case Lawsuit Filed

A state unemployment commission lawsuit against James A. Tufts and the Tufts Finance company is on file with the circuit clerk here for $232.43 in allegedly unpaid payroll compensation deductions, and $23.24 penalty.

The complaint charges that during the first nine months of 1947 Tufts had a taxable payroll of $9698.21 and did not pay 2.7 per cent of the amount for unemployment compensation.

Claude M. Johns, assistant attorney general, is the commission's attorney.

Homes Rise In Snow On Ruins Of Big Maine Fire

BAR HARBOR, Me., Feb. 2 (AP)—The harshest winter in recent years hasn't chilled the comeback spirit of wealthy summer colonists. A rugged townsfolk determined to repair havoc of the worst forest fires in Maine's history.

In a foot and a half of snow cloaking this playground of the famous today, a score of new homes already are rising among ruins of 200 leveled structures. More new construction is scheduled.

A new guest house of R. Amory Thorneike, former Boston broker, stands nearly complete on a hill, in a clean-timbered contrast to the blackened debris of surrounding dwellings.

Nearby on ravaged Eagle Lake road, Robert H. Dumond, disabled coast guard veteran, is raising with Cross aid a modest home for himself, his wife and two little boys.

The Dumonds are only one of nearly 1000 burned-out Maine families which, the Red Cross says, now are "actually weathering the winter in reasonably comfortable circumstances" in disaster huts, winterized cottages and undamaged houses.

The Red Cross said "it has spent and allocated for fire families more than $2,000,000" and that building grants to 97 Bar Harbor folk total $300,000.

Fluhrer Runs For Senator

William H. (Heinie) Fluhrer of Medford, well-known bakery owner of Southern Oregon and Northern California, has tossed his hat in the state political ring with an announcement that he intends to be a republican candidate for the state senate.

He will seek the post left vacant by Ashland's Earl T. Newby, who resigned to become secretary of state.

Everett A. Faber, merchant with businesses in Central Point and Medford, previously was reported in the senatorial race from Jackson county.

Fluhrer is a veteran of two wars and owns bakeries in Medford, Klamath Falls and Eureka, Calif., with branches in Grants Pass, Alturas, Yreka and Mt. Shasta.

Search Without Warrant Invalid

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—The supreme court declared invalid today an arrest made by federal narcotics agents who, although they did not have a warrant, searched a hotel room and seized a quantity of opium.

Their prisoner, Anne Johnson, operator of the Europe hotel in Seattle, protested to the supreme court that the arrest violated "the constitution's guarantee against unreasonable search and seizure."

Justice Jackson delivered the 5-4 decision. Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Black, Reed and Burton dissented.

Forest fires destroyed enough timber in the United States from 1909 to 1938 to build 6,500,000 five-room houses.

3 Accidents Cause Arrest

Two minor automobile accidents on city streets occupied police attention over the week-end, and arrests resulted from each.

Perry Kuhn, 37, of the homaja housing project, was booked for failure to yield the right of way and no operator's license early Saturday night and posted $30 bail after an accident at S. 6th and Mitchell.

Police reported a car owned by Mrs. Ellen Wouner of the housing unit and driven by Kuhn was involved in a smash-up with a vehicle operated by Garrett Worrell, Willow Ranch, Calif. Kuhn received a skinned leg and forehead in the wreck, and 18-month-old Carol Wouner a cut lip. Both cars were extensively damaged.

Harold Dean Mason, 30, 2335 Vine, was cited for a court appearance for reckless driving early Sunday morning. He was arrested on East Main after his car skidded into a
