NAVAL AIR STATION, SEATTLE — (Special Correspondence) — As smooth and beautiful an air trip as one could take any time, anywhere, ended tonight at this handsome, sprawling installation on the shore of Lake Washington in the northern precincts of Seattle.

It was the first leg of a journey that tomorrow is to put us on board the USS Ajax on a "civilian orientation" cruise down the Pacific Coast.

EPLEY

It was an auspicious beginning for our jaunt, that flight over the snowfields of Central and Northern Oregon and Western Washington, that began after noon in Klamath Falls today (Friday, February 6) and ended just at dusk in Seattle.

My Klamath companion on the journey is State Legislator Henry Semon, the Henley potato farmer who knows the fore and aft of a potato digger just as I do the port and starboard sides of a typewriter —but not a lot about ships. Another landlubber, Flavel Temple, a Portland hotel man, joined us in Portland, and I understand two or three other civilian citizens will join our little party tomorow morning before the Ajax sails with us from Bangor.

The navy picked Henry and me up at Klamath Falls this time. Commander Bert Creighton of Seattle naval air public information office came with the two-motored Beechcraft that put down on the Klamath airport at noon. After lunch at the Pelican we took off in brilliant sunshine, and found similarly perfect weather all the way to Seattle.

The navy men wanted to go over Crater lake. I was given the co-pilot's seat to direct the pilot to the lake. I found it not so easy to orient one's self in the sky when one is accustomed to seeing everything from the ground, but managed to spot the notch in the mountains that led us right over the great caldera that cradles Klamath's premier scenic attraction.

I stayed in the co-pilot spot all the way into Portland, with earphones adjusted to hear the buzz, crackle and talk that goes on in the air all the time. Shortly after leaving Crater lake, we heard a pilot report to the tower at Medford that he believed his plane was on fire, and asked that there be a fire truck standing by when he came into the Medford field. "He believes there's a fire," said my pilot. "I think I'd find out." We tried to keep tuned for further developments, but heard nothing more of it. Over Redmond my pilot reported his position, and again in the neighborhood of The Dalles, where we turned westward to go down the Columbia.

The white peaks are beautiful from the ground, but even more awe-inspiring from the air where you see them at a different angle and see more of them at one time. For a while we were looking at eight—Jefferson, Hood, St. Helen's, Adams, Rainier, and the Three Sisters.

Fresh snow lay all over the northern part of the Oregon route. From the air, the snow fields were studded with curious bumps or blisters which puzzled us and which we never quite figured out.

At Portland municipal field we slipped gently down on the runway, after trying vainly to contact the tower there. The pilot finally asked someone else to relay to the tower his intention to land on runway No. 11. Nobody was in the way and we came in without incident, taking of with Mr. Temple and a new supply of gasoline aboard.

The snow field and mountains of the Oregon leg of the trip were beautiful, but even more impressive was the ride through the gathering dusk into Seattle. It was cloudy to the west and the sunset was terrific, out there over the tiers of mountains and billows of purple mist. Soon we were over a vast field of lights that was Tacoma, and beginning to lose altitude as we swung over big splashes of water and black land in the Puget Sound area.

I couldn't see our field as we came over it in the dark, but knew we were due for a landing as we banked sharply to the right. Back we came over the lake, and suddenly I saw, straight ahead, the two rows of brilliant lights lining our runway. They looked for a moment as if they were vertical columns, and we were entering a vast door. We entered, our wheels again touched the earth with hardly a bump, and in a few moments we were out of the plane and riding to the bachelor officers' quarters where we were put up in fine accommodations for the night.

The smoothness of the air throughout the trip was a matter for much comment. When I spoke about it to Commander Creighton, he held up a finger and said:

"Editorially speaking, sir, what happened was that the navy saw the bumps before we got to them and went around them."

That's good enough for me. I hope the navy does as well with Japanese mines and rough seas which may lie ahead of us in our cruise down the coast.

SOMETIME, somewhere, there must be a showdown between the big democratic majority of the United Nations and the red minority comprising Russia and her satellites, who thus far have hamstrung the peace organization—and Korea may well furnish an early important (if not definitive) test.

The position leading up to the present disorders in Southern Korea is this: at the end of the late war the hermit kingdom, as Korea was called, was occupied by Russian troops in the northern half and by Americans in the south. It was understood that the aim should be to consolidate the two areas and hold free elections for establishment of an independent Korean government.

Instead of pursuing this policy, Russia sealed off the north from the south completely and communized the Soviet section. At the same time red agents made an intensive drive to organize communist cells in the south and have done their best to create unrest among the people.

Peace in Far East

KOREA, being a mighty atom strategically from the military standpoint, is a pivotal point for peace in the Far East. What more natural, then, than that the UN general assembly finally should send a commission to Korea with instructions to hold elections throughout the country — meaning both south and north. The Soviet Ukraine declined a place on the commission.

Well, of course the Russians have refused to permit this commission even to enter Northern Korea. Not only that, but a wave of sabotage and bloody political disturbances, aimed at hampering the commission, has swept the United States zone, and American sources attribute this trouble to leftists.

The commission now has reported its failure to the UN little assembly (which sits when the general assembly isn't in session) and has settled back to await the decision. So now the big speculation is what line the little assembly will take.

An American spokesman at Lake Success was quick to express the view that the correct procedure would be to instruct the commission to carry on, that is, to establish a government in Southern Korea with the idea that the north should be brought in as soon as possible. That sounds like horse-sense and also breathes the urgency and determination with which Secretary of State Marshall himself advocated the creation of the commission by the general assembly.

Powerful Weapon

THE old adage that half a loaf is better than none is particularly apt as applied to Korea. For America to abandon the Southern Koreans and let the bolshevists take them over not only would outrage justice but would place in Russia's hands a powerful weapon for military operations. It was Russian influence in Korea back in 1904 which was the main immediate cause of the Russo-Japanese war, for Nippon maintained that Korea was a "dagger pointing at her heart."

With the half loaf the UN will have to be contented until such time as Russia has a change of heart. The peace organization will at least have done all possible to implement the vast majority of world opinion in these trying times.

KFLW tonight introduces a new half-hour drama program which goes by the handle of "Twelve Players." The program's title is taken from the fact that the cast includes 12 top AFRA radio artists of Hollywood air fame and although all of them are now cast every week in starring roles, they all show up and audition before each other to win the parts. All of this supposedly brings out the fact that an actor's severest critic is another actor.

Tonight's drama is dubbed, "Dino Is Dead," and comes on at 8:30 p. m.

• • •

The Boy Scouts come in for a lion's share of attention on "Point Sublime" tonight as Ben Willet tries his hand at the old good deed stuff.

August Moon, Howie MacBrayer, Evelyn Hanover and Hattie Hirsch will all be present to lend a hand when the halfie comes on at 8 p. m. over KFLW.

• • •

"This Is Adventure," a half-hour presentation of the coast guard, becoming increasingly popular with local radio fans, is on tonight at 9 o'clock.

• • •

This program has it all over the usual run-of-the-mill adventure plug, in our estimation anyway, since it is based on actual coast guard experiences, and is presented in really adventuresome style. That's at 9 p. m. over KFLW.

• • •

Answering the phone Saturday night we were greeted with a sweet, feminine voice, inquiring, "Is this the man that washes?" Expecting the usual "you-dirty-thing-you" reply to our negative answer, imagine our amazement when the sweet, young thing replied, "Oh, I'm so sorry—I must have the wrong number."

Oh well, who knows what evil—

A special ABC broadcast tonight at 9:45 will be the interview by Clifton Fadiman of Dr. H. M. Marvin, executive secretary of the American Heart association.

• • •

The quarter-hour cast has been spotted to aid the association's campaign for funds to combat heart disease. This is not, incidentally, the sort of heart disease dealt with by John J. Anthony!

• • •

A quick look at those KFLW programs for this evening, not already cussed and discussed spots "So You Want to Lead a Band" at 6:30, "The Lone Ranger" at 7, "Bob Wills" at 7:30, "Your Navy Recruiter" at 9:30, and "Stardust Melodies" at its usual 10 o'clock slot. If Chuck Cecil, maestro of LW's Telequest, usually heard at 11 o'clock, is sufficently recovered from a bout with the flu, the program will run as usual. If he isn't, network moosik will by necessity have to suffice.

Gallup Poll

Europe Suspects Aid Plan Is Move To Bolster Trade

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 9 — Although the people of England, France and Italy welcome the Marshall plan and approve of it, there is a widespread suspicion, especially in France and England, that our chief motive in proposing the plan is to find markets to bolster our trade and stave off a depression.

This is revealed in a special public opinion survey conducted in the three nations which would be the principal recipients of aid under the Marshall plan now being debated in congress. The survey was conducted simultaneously by three affiliates of the American Gallup poll—the British institute of public opinion, the French institute of public opinion and DOXA, the Italian institute of public opinion. The same questions were used in each country.

A survey of American opinion completed about the same time by the American institute of public opinion shows that American conceptions of why our government proposed the Marshall plan are somewhat more lofty and idealistic than the conceptions held by the people of Britain, France and Italy.

The survey covered four questions. The first was:

"Have you heard or read about the Marshall plan?"

The results in England, France and Italy show that the plan is better known there than it is here in the United States.

	Have-Heard	Have Not
England	89%	11%
France	91	9
Italy	78	22
U. S. A.	71	29

The remaining questions were confined to those who had heard or read about the plan.

"Do you favor or oppose the plan?"

	Favor	Oppose	No opin.
England	60%	20%	20%
France	60	13	27
Italy	65	14	21

For what reasons in your opinion did the United States propose the Marshall plan?"

	Eng.	France	Italy
To help Europe, humanitarian	24%	23%	35%
Wants markets, profits, bolstering Europe to stave off depression	22	26	17
To stop communism	14	14	20
To get more power, imperialism	8	9	11
For our own safety, to promote peace	3	1	9
Other reasons	3	6	9
No opinion	26	21	17

In the case of Italy the figures add to more than 100 per cent because some voters named more than one reason.

How Americans appraise our own government's motives in proposing the Marshall plan is indicated by how Americans voted recently in an institute poll on the question:

"What is your understanding of the purpose of the Marshall plan?"

Conspicuously absent in public thinking is the idea that we propose to aid Europe to build up markets and stave off a postwar economic collapse.

Vote in U. S. A.

To help Europe	56%
To curb communism	8
To foster better understanding with Europe	2
Other	8
No opinion	26

The tri-nation poll abroad also probed the question of what reasons people think Russia has for opposing the Marshall plan.

"For what reasons in your opinion does Russia oppose the Marshall plan?"

The vote follows.

Poll in France

To oppose U. S. A.	5%
Because it goes against Russian plans to control Europe	22
Because it threatens communism	10
Because Russia is interested in keeping Europe miserable	7
For economic reasons	5
Other	4
No opinion	27

Poll in Italy

Because it menaces communism, threatens Russia's expansion	29%
Interferes with Russia's imperialistic plans	26
Russia fears improved living	8
Threatens her own safety	7
No opinion	37

Some people in Italy gave more than one reason; hence the table adds to more than 100 per cent.

Poll in England

Fears America	18%
Russia dislikes anti-communist aim of the plan	17
Fears weakening her European position	11
Wants to dominate other countries	10
Fears a western bloc	8
Wants her own way	7
Others	7
No opinion	25

Her Last Word

PORTLAND, ORE.—Just lately a 16-year-old girl lay dying of t. b. and at the last moment she raised up and reached out her arms with a shout—JESUS I'M COMING and fell back dead.

A Bible had come into the girl's hands and this she read and was given faith to lay hold on Christ as the Son of God who had died for her. Right then, when she came into this heart-faith in Christ, God made her His own with the gift of eternal life.

The Bible says that Stephen looked up into heaven and saw the glory of God and Jesus standing on the right hand of God. And could not heaven open for this child of faith also? — BLESSED ARE THE DEAD WHO DIE IN THE LORD—BIBLE.

National Forest Lease Funds Due

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP)—The federal land management bureau will pay Oregon $1,479,960.89 as the state's share of receipts from sale and lease of national forest and grazing resources.

Counties receive the money in lieu of taxes lost by reason of the federal ownership of the land.

The payment represents $1,442,120.80 from timber sales, $37,055.12 under the Taylor grazing act and $784.97 from mining royalties.

Telling The Editor

Letters printed here must not be more than 300 words in length, must be written legibly on ONE SIDE of the paper only and must be signed. Contributions following these rules are warmly welcomed.

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., (To the Editor)—I hope you will print this in your paper as I think Mr. R. H. Dunbar deserves to be congratulated on his stand about Linkville cemetery. I think it's about time the people here were waking up. Linkville cemetery is a disgrace to the city and right in the city where it is seen by all who come here. I can't see where the council or cemetery board had any right to use the money for Linkville in Memorial park.

The council or cemetery board doesn't hesitate to ask for more taxes if it's something they want. This is the first time they have ever asked for Linkville cemetery. I am a tax payer, have been for almost 20 years. I am wondering if they get it? Would they use it in Linkville cemetery? I sincerely hope so.

Thank you.
