The Doctor Says—

Diphtheria Still Dangerous

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.
Written for NEA Service

Fifty years ago, diphtheria was a disease which killed off many promising and attractive youngsters, and sometimes their elders as well. Almost anyone over 60 can recall losing some valued relative or friend to this dread disease.

Diphtheria, while not yet extinct, is far less frequent and, if caught early, is much less dangerous. The conquest of diphtheria is a result of the discovery of its cause, which is a germ, as well as the development of an antitoxin, which counteracts the poison produced by the growth of the germ in the body, and the perfection of a means of vaccination or inoculation, which increases resistance to the disease.

Diphtheria germs usually grow in the throat, where they produce a grayish membrane from which the toxin, or poison, is poured into the blood. This poison causes fever and seriously affects the heart, nerves, lungs and kidneys.

The germ-containing membrane often grows down toward the voice box and lungs, narrowing the passage for air and sometimes shutting it off completely. Today, however, if the diagnosis is made in the first two days or so, injections of antitoxin can be given which will cause the symptom to subside rapidly.

TOXOID EFFECTIVE

We also now have a substance called toxoid, which should be given to children. This toxoid stimulates the body to produce its own antitoxin against diphtheria. Thus, if the germs gain entrance later, they find good resistance present and are not likely to be able to take hold.

The means to combat diphtheria are now known. By using them, and not relaxing our efforts, we should be able to wipe out this disease completely. Certainly, we have already gone a long way in this direction.

O'Donovan Death Told

Friends of the Rev. Father John O'Donovan, 35-year-old Catholic priest, learned with deep regret of his passing Saturday at St. Charles hospital in Bend, following an illness of the past several weeks. A kidney infection was the cause of death.

The Rev. O'Donovan served in the Sacred Heart parish in Klamath Falls in 1937-38 and was widely known in this community. He was born August 14, 1912, in Dirbrum, Tipperary county, Ireland, and was ordained in June, 1937, at St. Patrick's seminary, Carlow, Ireland. He came to the Baker diocese in Oregon in September, 1937, receiving from Bishop McGrath his first appointment which was in Klamath Falls. Next he went to The Dalles and from there was sent as pastor of the new parish at Dufur in 1938. In 1941 he received the appointment to the new St. Thomas parish at Redmond, where he was serving at the time of his death.

Final rites will be held in Redmond tomorrow morning but interment will take place at Mt. Calvary cemetery here at 4 o'clock Tuesday. The requiem office will be recited by priests of the diocese tonight at 7 p. m., at St. Thomas church in Redmond and solemn requiem high mass will be celebrated at the church there at 10 a. m. Tuesday, with Rev. O'Donovan's brother, the Rev. Father Thomas O'Donovan as celebrant. Father James O'Connor of Merrill and Father Michael Ahearn of Chiloquin will assist.

Priests from Sacred Heart parish will attend final rites in Redmond and also at the Mt. Calvary cemetery here tomorrow. Friends are invited.

Rich even when you make it mild...
Mellow even when you make it strong

1. Each year we search the world to find the finest crops for M.J.B's richer blend. On each plantation, coffee quality varies from season to season—but only the top crops come to M.J.B.

2. "Individual roasting" coaxes out all the secret goodness locked in every bean of M.J.B's top-of-the-crop coffees. These subtle extra flavors are lost by most roasting methods.

3. Highest-vacuum pack seals in every whiff of M.J.B's fragrant goodness till it reaches your cup. Try it today and you'll agree—you can't make a bad cup of M.J.B.
