

Baker Up For Supervisor

YREKA, Calif., March 24—Ed Baker has filed nomination papers for the post of supervisor of the second district, bringing to the total of four the number of candidates who will run for the job. The present supervisor of that district, T. Rodney Douglass of Mount Shasta, will not be a candidate.

Florin Kohlbacker, W. R. Barr and Hugh Corwin filed their nomination papers for Douglass' post earlier.

Supervisor Gordon Jacobs is the only other supervisor who will be opposed for re-election. James Stevenson of Macedoel has taken out nomination papers but has not as yet returned them to County Clerk Waldo Smith. George C. Yost of Tulelake has announced his intention to run for Jacobs' post, but may not have taken out nomination papers.

Candidates have until Saturday noon, March 27 in which to circulate nomination papers.

May King Idea Eyed

CASCADE SUMMIT, March 24—Every town should have a May Queen but what can Cascade Summit do? It is overrun with bachelors instead of pretty maidens so there is speculation on having a May King instead to celebrate lodge opening and start of fishing season on May Day. But which one to choose? Agent Nolan Johnson of the S. P. depot said he was working that day. Grant F. Erickson of Adkison and Meissner says not to wake him early to be King of the May, and Jack Meissner is off on a ski-trek so he won't be here. Bill Akers of Odell Summit lodge thinks he should be it because of his superior height, and Frederick Maguire, also of the lodge, refused to run because he has been shoveling snow enough now and he wouldn't appreciate the suggested prize. Instead of a golden key to the city the king would receive a be-ribboned snow shovel so he could dig down and find the city.

Los Alamos Atom Workers Face Marital Problems After Divorce Case Row

By SANKY TRIMBLE
LOS ALAMOS, N. M., March 24 (AP)—Residents of this atomic laboratory project reservation currently are stuck with their marital problems.

They've run up against a temporary legal barricade in bringing divorce action in New Mexico courts. Although they were given the right to vote in state elections by a special act of the 1947 New Mexico legislature, legal status of residents here as citizens of New Mexico is clouded.

Hopes for a state supreme court clarification of the matter dimmed recently.

Not Residents
Complications set in when District Judge David Carmody of Santa Fe ruled in effect that residents of Los Alamos are not legal residents of the state. His district includes Sandoval county in which the A-bomb laboratory reservation is located.

Judge Carmody's action came in dismissal of a divorce complaint brought by a resident of the atomic community. He ruled his court had no jurisdiction to grant a divorce to a person on the federal reservation. Saying he realized the "seriousness of the decision," Judge Carmody said it was based entirely "upon the point of law that Los Alamos is owned by the United States government, and it has exclusive jurisdiction over it." He held, therefore, that Los Alamos "in effect is not a part of the state of New Mexico for residential purposes."

Carmody termed it "very unfortunate that a case such as this cannot be immediately determined by the supreme court of our state and possibly by the supreme court of the United States."

His action, he explained, applies to residents of Los Alamos who live on property condemned by the federal government and taken over by the AEC. It did not apply, he said, to some who live on federal forest land at the project.

The jurist voiced concern over the

High School

New and Comment
By MARY LOU CASE

Art and stage crews are working all this week on the set of the student body play, "The Black Flamingo." Four departments contribute toward making the play a success: the woodworking department, under Francis Scapple; the art department, under Bob Bannister; the orchestra, under John O'Connor; and, of course, the dramatics, under Mrs. Roberta Blomquist.

The night of April 1 will be the only evening performance of the play, and a student matinee is being presented March 31, one week away. On this day students in the auditorium will see a reenactment of the fall of the Bastille and the French revolution. The play centers around the inn, "The Black Flamingo," which was a notorious den for thieves. Marie Antoinette's famous necklace is stolen and throughout the play the discovery of the thief is attempted.

Over $1000 in costumes will be on the stage for the play, period dress that has been collected through the years. Mrs. Blomquist presented this play once before, before the war. Girls helping with the costumes, dressing and prompting will be Della Michael, Barbara Perkins, Leona Montgomery, Wanda Murray, Jessie Swift, Shirley Sayers, Jackie Baert and Dolores Wright.

Ruhe Huston and Cameron Stewart, KU's two senior quiz kids, did very well on Tuesday night's quiz program over KPJI. Out of the five contestants, Cameron placed second and Ruhe placed third. This makes the second broadcast the two have competed in, and they were substituting last night for the Bonanza pair which were sponsored.

Pellicana's broadcast tonight is a historical review of Oregon with Celia Brown acting as emcee. Charles Stark, manager of the Klamath chamber of commerce, will be interviewed about the centennial. Janet Russell, Georgianna Clark, John Baker and Bruce Irving

Tourist Travel Guide Slated

SALEM, March 24 (AP)—The state travel information department compiled today a list of more than 150 entertainment events to attract tourists for the rest of this year.

The events range from territorial centennial celebrations and beauty pageants to roundups and fishing derbies.

The department said its list was compiled from results of a survey of chambers of commerce and other civic groups.

It said the most important events include:

Portland rose festival, June 9 to 13; Pendleton roundup, September 15 to 18; territorial centennial celebration at Oregon City, August 13 to 15; the Miss Oregon pageant at Seaside, July 23 to 25.

Overeating Only Cause For Fatness

WASHINGTON, March 24 (AP)—If you weigh too much, don't look for fancy excuses. You eat too much, says Dr. Louis H. Newburgh of the University of Michigan medical school.

All this high-sounding stuff about overweight being caused by pituitary glands, the hypothalamus, the endocrine glands, brain defects or heredity—just big words, says Dr. Newburgh.

Years of extensive research, he says, have failed to find any logical cause for overweight except overeating and underexercise.

The Dead sea contains 11,600,000,000 tons of salt, to which the river Jordan adds another 850,000 tons each year.

are the other juniors helping on the show.

All about automobiles will be told by Gerald Bevan's speech classes on the educational broadcast Thursday at 1:15 over KFLW. Different types of speaking will be explained and demonstrated. Participating will be Darlene Price, Leona Montgomery, Bill Snyder, Bob Hilton, Merlene Burningham, Elaine Ericks and John Wood.
