Today's Roundup

By MALCOLM EPLEY

SOME one must be slipping," writes a Bonanza woman about the advertising for Crater lake. Mrs. Hattie Walker says that she spent three months last summer at a tourist camp at Cottage Grove, and there met many people traveling through the country on sight-seeing tours. "They were all going to see the Pacific ocean and the redwoods, but only a few had heard of Crater lake and very few thought it worth the side trip to see it."

Over the years, Crater lake has had a great deal of advertising. It is certainly well featured in any of the publicity literature which is published by community groups in Klamath, Jackson and other nearby counties. It has not been overlooked by the state highway department's advertising promotion program.

The proof of advertising effectiveness is in the results, of course. Crater lake last season had the largest tourist attendance in its history. The total was 367,696, as compared with 273,564 in 1946. (Incidentally, of last year's total, 259,821 entered the park by the south, east and north entrances.)

The figures from the park service indicate that Crater lake advertising is getting results. Mrs. Walker's comment, however, is highly interesting, and it shows that there is a lot of publicity work to be done for Klamath county's premier national attraction. If there are tourists in Oregon from the East who haven't even heard of Crater lake, or think it's not worth the short side trip required to get to it, we'll have to do something about it.

Important

THE south entrance to Crater Lake park is the most popular of all, and it is a Klamath county entrance through Fort Klamath. East entrance is also a Klamath county entrance, and the north entrance is mainly fed from highway 97, the federal highway bisecting Klamath county.

What Crater lake tourist traffic means to Klamath economically is thus quite clear. We live so close to it, we sometimes overlook its importance. It is certain that that record number of tourists in the park last year did a lot of business with Klamath county people.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

IT seems to me that as things are the government should at all times be in a position to meet any emergency for the national defense. Therefore, the draft is a reasonable measure. Certainly, our present objective enemy will give little or no notice. In fact, the atomic bomb makes notice of war impossible. We must at all times be ready, even though a permanent standing army is offensive to the American people. That is one of the many prices we have to pay for the mistakes of our rulers.

On the other hand, if the government has the draft, universal military service would seem to be unnecessary. A six-month period of orientation and indoctrination is either too much or too little. If after eight years in elementary school and four in high school, the American boy has still to be told that he is an American, something exceedingly foul exists in our schools. If that task is to be undertaken by the army after the child has been corrupted by the schools, six months is not enough. Instead of disrupting the child's life by universal military service, we ought to discover what is wrong with our schools—and correct what is wrong, the educators notwithstanding.

Equitable

THE draft is a fairer, a more equitable system of handling this problem. During the draft period, the young man would have ample time to be trained in military service and formation. Those draftees who are married or whose work is essential could be inducted in the national guard, which should be increasingly important, particularly as, in the next war, the fifth column, consisting of American citizens, may be our severest enemy.

So, let us have the draft as a permanent institution, using such manpower as we actually need, no more, no less. It is infinitely important to keep as many of our boys in college for technical training as is possible. Chemists, for instance, are as important as soldiers for the national defense.

The real obstacle to a sane approach to the problem is the reversion to the fear technique. If the American people have to be frightened into patriotism, our civilization has failed and will be destroyed. If the army and navy have to use the clatter of earthwreath Stalin boosters on the radio to stir the American to a love of country, the army and navy have lost the confidence of the American people. If they have to have scaresters shrieking over the airways that Stalin is on his way over here as they screamed that Hitler was on his way over here, then we are a debased race.

Faith

NOT by fear is a strong people moved to love their country and to make sacrifices for it. The proof of the truth of that is that the scare glamor has fallen flat and the American response to it has been without faith or fervor. Nothing can move our people but a great faith in our civilization, a fervent belief that we live under a form of government and in a way of life that is superior to all others, and that for it we are willing to die.

It was in that spirit that the pioneers risked the forest, fought the Indians, crossed fierce and unknown rivers and built a free society for courageous people. It was not fear that produced a Miles Standish or a Daniel Boone or a Lewis and Clark. It was not fear that stirred our ancestors to write the Mayflower compact, the Declaration of Independence, or the Constitution of the United States. A people who fear, cringe before power and debate themselves before the mighty.

It is not by fear that we shall achieve greatness. It is by faith—by faith in our institutions, in our civilization which is based upon the dignity of man, protected by our constitution and law.

That was not told our soldiers in the orientation and indoctrination courses in the last war. Instead they were told the wonders of our ally, Soviet Russia, wonders that we are now being told were, in reality, lies. We want no more lies of one kind or another.

SAIGON

The new cars are to be built at the Pacific Fruit Express company shops in Los Angeles, Colton and Roseville. Their completion will mean a total of 10,000 new PFE cars since 1941, enough to make a solid train 80 miles long. The company is currently receiving the last few hundred cars on its 1947 orders.

The Pacific Fruit Express fleet has already reached a record breaking size of approximately 40,000 cars, including more than 9,000 cars.

The PFE has rebuilt in its own shops, making the fleet the most modern as well as the largest fleet of refrigerator cars in the world. It was pointed out. Another 2,500 cars are to be rebuilt this year.

Why Bachelor Girls Often Marry Bachelor Men . . .!

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK. (AP) — Her friends were aghast when Adele Beaudette announced she was giving up her career to marry a "bachelor boy."

Henry T. Bogle, who took the olive branch and unscathed the cap with easy strength. "Oh Hank!" cried Adele, "O-h-h Ha-a-a-n-k!"

And so they were married.

HAL BOYLE

She was trim and beautiful in that way only blondes can be before they begin to overflow their girlishness. She was bright, efficient, quick-witted. She had her own apartment, her own bank account and a held-down job as executive assistant to the president of an engineering firm.

Wives thought enviously of Adele's freedom.

"You don't know how lucky you are, Adele," they said to her enviously. "No man can tell you what to do."

Enjoyed Work

For a long time Adele thought they were right. She enjoyed her work, her freedom from household worries, the excitement of meeting new men and dropping them when they became too persistent.

As a matter of fact, however, most of them were ready to call it quits about the time Adele was. They found her beauty had a porcelain quality, her wit became sometimes too sharp.

All except Hank Bogle. He had loyally admired her without reservation. For five years she had dated him about once a week, using him to fill up a lonely evening. Then one evening at a night club Adele saw Hank dancing with a secretary in his real estate firm.

It was quite a shock to Adele. It piqued her, too. She had never thought of Hank out with another girl.

Three days later Hank was to take her to the opening of a new play. That afternoon she called him at his office.

"Drop by the apartment for a drink first," she suggested.

It was a rainy night. When Adele arrived home, she felt fatigued and lonely in her apartment. It seemed bare and strange to her—a shell without warmth. As she was dressing, Adele looked in her mirror and discovered a gray hair.

"Another one," she mused.

Daily Rush

She began to think of her life—the hurried breakfasts, the daily subway rush, the long hours at the office, the increasing number of evenings alone at home, the fact she was spending more and more time with older career girls.

Suddenly she realized Hank was late. He had never been late before. Suppose he didn't come? Terrified, she went out to the kitchen to mix the martini.

She tried to unscrew the cap on the olive bottle. It stuck, she banged it against the drainboard. It wouldn't come loose.

She felt, for the first time in her life, completely helpless.

"The bell rang. She ran crying

The World Today

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Paradoxical though it seems, the most hopeful news which workers for peace have had in a long time is the disclosure that the United States has "an adequate supply" of atomic bombs and is steadily making more.

Military strength is the best guarantee any country can have against aggression so long as the world still breeds throwbacks to barbarism. It's tough to have to admit that peace must be maintained through fear rather than through brotherly love. But that's the way it still is.

So as the garlic-laden breath of war continues to warm upon our necks, from you know where, it is good to hear from members of congress that David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the atomic energy commission, has given the house appropriations committee this assurance about the status of our bomb supply. Equally encouraging is the assertion by Senator Hickenlooper of Iowa, chairman of the senate house-atomic energy committee, that he believes if war comes again America should use the bomb with the aim of shortening the conflict and saving lives.

"I do not think the bomb should be used indiscriminately," the senator told a reporter. "But I have no qualms about our using it strategically, where it will be an effective means of ending the war."

War Means Illing

That makes sense. War means killing, and anyone who tries to compromise on that immutable fact is merely defeating his aim of lessening the disaster. Of course the first objective of every right-minded person should be absolute peace and the outlawing of war. But if peace is shattered by an aggressor, the most humane way of dealing with the situation is to knock him out the quickest way possible under accepted rules of war. That's the goal of every general staff—and it means killing.

There is no sense of condoning the sacrifice of millions of young soldiers on the battlefield in "legitimate" warfare, and shying at the killing of a few more thousands of civilians with an atomic bomb—if that will end or greatly shorten the conflict. Apropos of this, and just in passing, it is well to note that it's just as painful for a soldier to be killed as it is for a civilian.

Thus it is encouraging to feel that if we are attacked we shall not hesitate to use atomic bombs if necessary. Naturally, as Senator Hickenlooper says, the atomic bomb should be used only for strategic purposes. The useless killing of civilians or destruction of cities is wicked and indefensible. But if you could wipe out the enemy's industrial centers overnight, thereby ending the war, it would be the right thing to do.

It's well that we should get this problem of the atomic bomb ironed out in our minds, because one of these days we may have to act quickly. Hesitation might cost us our freedom.

CUT

PORTLAND, April 3 (AP)—An automobile plunged into the Sandy river east of here last night. The driver escaped with a cut in the leg.

He was Adolf T. Jenze, 54, Oak Grove, who leaped as the car struck the river, then made his way to shore.

How's Your Ambulation?

By FRANK TRIPP

I went to a hospital for a check-up. A friend gave me valuable advice. "You'll be safe if you keep away from the brain specialists," he said.

I took the rest of the works. Much to their disappointment, the doctors on the assembly line found no major parts missing; and none that won't last until I'm hung.

All they found were a few loose screws, which was no discovery at all. Editors have no discovery at all. Which was no discovery at all for years.

While I was there I thought I'd dig up a story; a medical story that ordinary human beings can understand. They suggested I write about ambulation. I says, "Show me one."

A young doctor said, "There goes one now." She was struggling down the corridor.

I stepped up to the past middle aged woman, who was decidedly past middle weight, and I asked solemnly:

"Is your ambulation coming along all right?" It was a mistake.

She turned an ugly stare on me and raised her hand to sweat my face, but put it on the wall to steady herself instead.

"Whv, you fresh, white-haired old fool; you insulting old—," she shouted. "Nurse, come quick!"

One came in time to save her from a stroke. I could see that the mad lady was one to have the last word and, fearing it might really be her last, I meant it.

My experience around hospitals has been limited but I should have known that it's smart to learn why a strange woman is in the repair shop before you ask her how's anything.

The encounter convinced me that ambulation needs more publicity. How could any layman believe that doctors would make use of a term so common that it might apply to a baby carriage? Maybe that's what rolled the plump lady.

This ambulation thing is great stuff and I'm just the guy to explain it so you can understand.

Let's take the case of Bridget Murphy who did our washing when I was a boy. Bridget did six washings a week, at 50c each, while her husband Tim drank up the dollar-ten a day he got for digging ditches.

Came the time when Bridget was about to add to her already adequate family. I was too young to remember the concern with which my mother must have watched the approach of Bridget's blessed event; which at no time interfered with her washing a day.

I do remember the event itself, for it was much talked about at our house. It happened the day before Bridget was to come to us. Her little Mickey came to say, "Max can't come; she's sick."

My mother thought it would be nice to cook something to send to the Murphys. The second morning she dispatched me with it. As I was leaving the door Bridget was waiting to enter.

She was incensed that my mother would not let her do the wash. She went home carrying mother's offering, did another wash that day and returned next morning and did ours.

That's ambulation. Maybe a little severe for the present flabby generation; nevertheless it was nature's forerunner of common surgical practice today. More strenuous, but the same idea.

Whether it's childbirth, hernia, appendicitis, gall bladder or what not, you're up on your feet about the second day. They get you up and all 'em.

Stitches pull out? Naw! Nothing happens that isn't good for you. Exercise improves circulation, moves healing blood to the wound, alloys clots and restores strength.

Helps nature just like Bridget Murphy's wash tub did 50 years ago. Few are the surgical cases that ambulation does not bring to earlier recovery.

But there are birds who can never enjoy an operation now. Such exertion would be far beyond their dignity and keep them in the hospital for life. And worse luck for the chronic grumblers; it takes all the zip out of their chief topic of conversation.

SOOT

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—I would like to add my comments to the current discussion of the condition of the city streets and to point out that by no means all the trouble lies in unpaved alleys and streets.

The heating plant is responsible for a large part of the dirt. And it isn't only the streets that suffer from the soot. In our part of town you can't hang a washing outside to dry without its being covered with soot and ashes. And a lawn just doesn't have a chance. We planted a new lawn last summer and already the soot has raised its level over an inch.

I am sure that soot is not good fertilizer. On days when the wind blows from the Northwest we can't go outside without being covered with soot falling in great hunks. "Black snow" is a very appropriate name for it.

It isn't only the part of town in the immediate vicinity of the heating plant that gets these black ash storms. The wind carries the soot over a large area.

It does seem that a town the size of Klamath Falls could muster enough support for a project to eliminate this disagreeable situation.

If we are to boast of our town and encourage new people to come here we should present them with a better first impression than they now receive. Many times I have heard people from other places say, "Klamath Falls is all right but it is so dirty," and it's no wonder, when most of the town is covered with a thick layer of black soot.

It seems that our city council we have one member who is interested in doing something to eliminate this condition. If enough voters will support Councilman Condry we should be able to get something done. If a petition is called for, I for one will gladly do my share to solicit signers.

Sincerely,
MRS. R. L. MYERS,
402 Walnut street.
