

School Museum Contains Audio-Visual Aids That Aid In Education Picture

By J. V. LaCLAIR
Director of Audio-Visual Education
Klamath Falls Schools

Audio-visual aids are tools which assist the teacher in his teaching. These tools are not restricted to the projected picture—the movie, the slide and the film strip, but audio-visual aids include all teaching tools which approach the mind through the eye and the ear. Audio-visual aids are to the teacher what the hammer and the saw are to the carpenter. Both need tools to build.

The school museum contains these groups of visual aids which provide experience with representations and reproductions of real things. In the case of the school museum the teacher may show objects, models and specimens to his class, which are replicas that will add interest and information.

The above picture shows a few of the articles donated to our student's school museum by their parents and friends. Most of these articles are now property of the museum however; a few of them have been loaned for an indefinite period. It is hoped that other interested individuals who have museum articles stored in their attics and basements will make them available to our school children.

Radio and recordings are strictly speaking audio-aids since their approach to the mind is through the ear. Both of these aids make use of the spoken word and other sounds. There is, however, a difference. The radio permits first hand, immediate and common reception of facts and principles, whereas recordings can be used repeatedly and at the proper moment in the learning process.

Both KUHS students and elementary school students, from the first through the 12th grades have taken advantage of the opportunity to broadcast, given to them by our local radio stations. The elementary school presents a program each Thursday at 10 a. m. and KUHS may be heard each Thursday at 1:15 p. m. The kindness afforded our school students by our local radio stations has been greatly appreciated by the students, parents, teachers and the school administrators.

Snow Survey Pushes On

SISTERS, April 5 (AP)—The ski-tractor snow survey expedition drove northward along the Cascade summit today headed for Breitenbush. Members of the annual snow and moisture survey rested here yesterday morning, after logging 385 miles of the trip and bucking heavy storms the past week.

Arch Wood, director of the western states snow surveys and leader of the Cascade project, said the group hopes to reach Breitenbush today; Ollalie lake on Tuesday; Timberline lodge on Wednesday; and Hood River sometime Thursday.

Piling snow and rugged weather battered the two ski-tractors and supply sleds last week on the trip to Sisters. It put the party a week off schedule. The party left Ashland late last month.

Ground Search Party Fights Raging Snowstorm At Start Of Trip To Army Plane Wreckage

VERLOT RANGER STATION, Mount Baker National Forest, April 5 (AP)—A ground search party, fighting a heavy snowstorm, left at dawn today for the wreckage of an army plane on Pilschuck peak, five miles from here. The plane carried three men, and it was believed impossible that any of them are still alive.

The party consisted of six members of the Seattle Mountaineers' club, guided by Barney Crain of the U. S. forest service. An air reserve officer, Millard Smith of Arlington, sighted the missing craft yesterday morning, smashed near the top of 5334-foot Pilschuck peak.

Another party of 12, consisting of army men, forest service employees and volunteers, followed the first party and planned to establish a base camp at timberline, about 4500 feet. The parties were using snowshoes and skis. It was hoped to establish radio communication between Verlot and timberline about noon.

Did Not Burn
Smith said it looked to him as if the ship smashed into the peak, shattered, but did not burn.

The wreckage, partially buried in snow, lay about 500 feet from the peak's summit on the southeast slope. The plane took off from McChord field Friday afternoon for Sand Point naval air station. Twenty minutes later the pilot reported radio trouble. It was not heard from again.

Aboard the plane were Capt. James E. McLaughlin, pilot, Rt. 7, Tacoma, on active duty as commanding officer of the Seattle air reserve; 2nd Lt. Francis A. Geyer, co-pilot, of Aberdeen; and 1st Sgt. Carl T. Fields, 28, of Puyallup, stationed at McChord field.

A ground party of 22 officers and enlisted men set out for the scene with snow weasels, trucks and radio-equipped jeeps immediately after Smith reported locating the wreckage. The party camped at the Verlot ranger station, about 10 miles from here, last night. It was to leave for the crash scene at dawn. Accompanying the party were relatives of the missing men. Among them were Jack and Fred Fields, younger brothers of Sergeant Fields. They flew to Arlington from Port Townsend, their home, and were driven here by a friend. Also here are the parents of Lt. Geyer, who drove from Aberdeen.

A severe wind storm Sunday morning caused considerable damage at the Walter Vincent ranch about 10 miles out of town on the Keno road. A board roof over the hay stack was blown off and thrown against a board cattle shelter knocking it over. There were no animals in the shelter at the time.

Plans for rebuilding the cattle shelter are being made with the lumber first to be extracted from the tangle of nails and debris.

Search For Boat Proves Futile

ASTORIA, Ore., April 5 (AP)—A week-end air search of waters off the Oregon and Washington coasts failed to find any trace of two men reported clinging to a capsized boat Saturday. Coast guardsmen said that off Tillamook rock, near where a Tacoma, Wash. civilian pilot was said to have seen the overturned craft, nothing was sighted. There were no reports of boats in distress and none missing in the area.

The search was set off Saturday when McChord field, Wash., relayed a report from an unnamed civilian pilot that two men were adrift off the coast here.
